IT'S 26 SECONDS OFF

This Day Just Didn't Make It

This is the day that didn't quite make it. It's a stepchild sort of day, and it came up 26 seconds short.

It's on account of Julius Caesar and Pope Gregory XIII. Or maybe it would be fairer to say it's on account of the earth and the sun.

Nobody has ever been able to figure out a perfect calendar. This is because the earth's orbit around the sun is not in an even multiple of its revolution on its axis.

The calendar in use at the time Julius Caesar came to power in Rome was 'way off. Things had got so bad that the midwinter festival was in the fall, and the autumn festival in midsummer. Something had to be done about it.

Julius put his astronomers to work. They figured the earth took 365¼ days to go through its complete cycle of seasons. So they came up with a calender of 365 days divided into 12 months, with an extra day tacked on every four years. The extra day was called bissexto calendas (Leap Year Day to you). That was in 45 B.C.

Julius put his own name on the new calendar, of course, and because Rome was the ruling center of the western world in those days, his Julian calendar came to be adopted all over Europe.

Now, Julius's astronomers were pretty good men for their time. But that extra day every four years soon got things out of kilter again, calendar-wise—because the earth does not take quite 365¼ days to go around the sun.

By the time Pope Gregory came along, 16 centuries later, the Julian calendar was wrong by 10 days.

Gregory fixed that — he thought. He ordered that leap year be dropped in all centennial years except those which are multiples of 400. And then he set the calendar back 10 days to get things straight again. That was in 1582.

Since the Pope in Rome was the ecclesiastical boss of the western world in those days, Gregory's calendar came to be adopted throughout the western world. Great Britain and her colonies (including those in America) adopted it in 1752. (About the last holdout, incidentally, was Russia, which clung to the Julian version until after the Bolsheviks took over—causing the "October revolution" to be fought in November.)

Gregory did the best job yet. But he didn't quite make things right.

It takes the earth 365 days 5 hours 48 minutes 46 seconds to go around the sun. Gregory's calendar, with the leap year adjustments, figures out at 365 days 5 hours 49 minutes 12 seconds. That's 26 seconds too long.

So Leap Year is still 26 seconds short of fixing things. As near as I can figure it, the calendar is now out 2 hours 45 minutes 32 seconds since Pope Gregory tried to set it right.

By the year 4905, it figures to be out a whole day. So maybe whoever is the boss man then can decree that the next Leap Year Day be skipped thus setting things right again.

That is, if there's anybody still around by that time.

Johnson Reveals U. S. Super Jet Exceeds Others In World

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Lyndon B. Johnson revealed today the existence of a new U.S. super jet fighter plane "that far exceeds the performance of any other aircraft in use in the world today."

The president, in his first televised news conference, said the new long range intercepter was being revealed at this time so that its flight testing and final phases of development could proceed in orderly fashion. The conference marked the end of the first 100 days of Johnson's administration.

SECRET OF 1959

He said the program was set up in secret in 1959, with Lockheed Aircraft in charge of the program. The engine was built by Pratt and Whitney, he said, while Hughes Aircraft developed the fire control and missile system.

Johnson gave no details of the aircraft's performance, except to say that it flies at speeds in excess of 2,000 miles an hour and performs at altitudes of up to 70,000 feet.

NEW PROCESS

One key to the development of this plane, which flies at times at three times the speed of sound, is a new process of fabrication with titanium metal which successfully resists the extremely high temperatures resulting from supersonic flight, Johnson said.

Johnson opened the news conference with the announcement of a list of high-level government appointments.

Heading that list was the selection of William P. Bundy for the key post of assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs.

Bundy, older brother of presidential adviser McGeorge Bundy, moves from the Pentagon where he has been assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs. In the new post he succeeds Roger Hilsman whose resignation was announced Tuesday.

Johnson said he is moving John McNaughton, the Pentagon's present general counsel, to the job Bundy now holds.

Johnson picked Daniel Luevano, an official of the California state government, to fill

SHE'S 103 TOMORROW

Catherine Washington Looks Over A Century

By BRUCE COLEMAN

Bones ache, eyes cannot read too well and sometimes one falls down when a person is almost 103.

But the appetite is good, the hand grip firm, and the mind quite keen.

These descriptions fit Mrs. Catherine Washington of 8 Cole Drive, Marin City, who will celebrate her 103rd birthday tomorrow.

Mrs. Washington, whose parents were slaves, is glad to be at home, having spent her last birthday and four months around it in San Rafael General Hospital with pneumonia.

"What do you do all day?" we asked. "Nothing," she replied.

On further questioning, she said she does her own cooking, preferring soups and poultry, watches television and sleeps. Days are short, she said, because she doesn't rise until 10:30 a.m.

Once a missionary in Liberia with her late husband, George James Washington, she still reads a few words of the Scriptures. "I cannot write my name," she said, because of arthritis.

She has no relatives, although she reared six children. All are dead. High points in her life are visitors. And although she has no favorite television programs she describes the machine as "it's better than living here alone." She goes outside sometimes with her cane but it is difficult because she cannot see well and sometimes falls down.

Mrs. Washington said she believes she outlasted her children because she was reared under "the old system," they under "the new system." Under the old system, her parents did not permit disobedience and "they used to sit down and talk to us. The people haven't any time to sit down and talk to their children now. They're in a hurry . . .

"Today everything seems to be upside down," she continued.

She said she is against the racial demonstrations across the nation, the shop-ins and the school strikes in New York and Boston.

Mrs. Washington has her own idea on civil rights: "The governor should see to it that there is some factory to benefit people and give them work . . . If a man is black and is qualified to do something, why shouldn't he have a job?

"There's no excuse for ignorance. The night schools are open. I went to night school. I didn't pay anything . . .

"Who cares about a face? It is the work you want done. You hire for what someone knows and what she can do. We have no more control over the skin than the flowers have of their color and they come forth."

Mrs. Washington says she tells children in her neighborhood not to drop waste paper on the lawn but to keep it clean and for this they call her lawn area "Mother Washington's lawn."

Mrs. Washington was wearing a blue quilted robe and a cap to match and said it is her usual dress in her apartment. "It's called a smoot robe and a smoot hat," she said.

Asked if she will have a birthday party, she replied, "Nothing's planned," but she said she always receives a birthday cake from Tamalpais High School.

CLASS ON THE MOVE

Loaded with books and supplies, this class was typical yesterday of the move from E Street School to the new $500,000 school in Glenwood. The pupils took the bus to the new school at the end of classes yesterday. Their first full day in the new school will begin Monday morning. For most, there will be no more need for the bus. The new school is right in their neighborhood.

END OF TERROR BIG CHANGE IN RUSSIA

Veteran Correspondent Gives His Views On People's Change After Stalin's Death

By DOROTHY SIMPERS

Terror has gone from the lives of the Russian people, and the average citizen is living much better than he did 10 years ago, a veteran foreign correspondent declared last night at the College of Marin.

Associated Press writer Eddy Gilmore said the disappearance of terror was the greatest single change in the Soviet Union since the death of Stalin in 1953.

Gilmore returned to Russia last year, 10 years after he completed 12 years as Associated Press reporter and Bureau Chief in Moscow. His recent assignment was to compare the Russia of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev with that of Stalin.

He and his Russian-born wife, a former ballerina, spent two months in the country, and in that time visited more private Russian homes than in his 12 years as a correspondent there.

"We were told to go where we liked, within the confines laid down for foreigners," Gilmore said. He was "amazed at the frankness" of citizens.

One man told him that when someoone knocked on the door at 2 a.m. he no longer reached for his "Siberian traveling clothes" because it would not be the secret police but friends.

Stalin's death brought a "quiet but startling revolution" in the lives of the people, Gilmore said. There are still secret police but citizens no longer go to prison "at the whim of a dictator," he added.

The reporter was told that if the Communist Party is to receive the respect of the people it must disassociate itself from terror. Young men want an explanation of a Communist Party system that gave birth to Stalin's despotism of 25 years, he said.

Gilmore found the price of food and most items "shockingly high." But nothing like when he left the country 10 years earlier. He noted a "remarkable upswing in the standard of living."

His Russian mother-in-law,

Car Injuries Are Fatal; 7th Death For '64

John A. Tappendorff, 83, of 50 Palm Avenue, San Rafael, died yesterday at Marin General Hospital of injuries he received in an auto accident Tuesday.

His death was the seventh traffic fatality in Marin this year. Last year at this time there were four traffic deaths.

Tappendorff suffered a severe chest injury when the car in which he was a passenger rolled 50 feet off a private road on the Cedars School property west of San Rafael.

The driver, Mrs. Marie D. Tappendorff, of the same address, the victim's daughter-in-law, said the car rolled from the edge of a narrow dirt road onto the school property.

She suffered bruises and was treated at Marin General Hospital.

A native of Ferndale, Humboldt County, Tappendorff had lived in Marin County for 14 years. He was a retired printer.

He was an honorary life member of Elks Lodge No. 823, Vancouver, Wash.

He was the husband of the late Ethel A. Tappendorff and is survived by a son, John Tappendorff Jr., of San Rafael, and three nieces.

Funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Tuesday at Chapel of the Hills, San Anselmo. Entombment will be in Mount Tamalpais Cemetery, San Rafael.

Fence Stays, Public Can Use Beach

The fence will stay firmly planted in sands between Stinson Beach and Seadrift Beach.

But the public can't be kept off the beach, despite the iron fence.

This was the decision handed down yesterday by Judge Joseph G. Wilson, sitting in Marin Superior Court, at the conclusion of a four-year court battle.

The William Kent Estate Co., developers of homes on the Seadrift sandspit, put up iron posts in 1953, dividing the private beach from Stinson Beach State Park.

Marin County and the state have argued that the public has a right to use the Seadrift

Ruby Trial Still Needs Two Jurors

DALLAS (AP) — A special Saturday session in Jack Ruby's murder trial failed today to complete the jury for the historic case.

Two more jurors are required.

SPRING GARDENING IN MARIN MAGAZINE

It's that time of the year when the urge for Marinites to get out into their gardens and dig and plant is at its strongest.

Marking the arrival of the "green thumb" season, today's I-J Marin Magazine presents, in addition to its regular features, a special spring gardening section.

Bay Government Rejects State's Bay Fill Proposal

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Assn. of Bay Area Governments has opposed a state administered moratorium on bay filling.

The association yesterday accepted a committee report opposed to the state plan and agreed any plans should be "self imposed" by local governments acting through ABAG officers.

Mayor Wallace Johnson of Berkeley proposed that ABAG be designated as an "enforcement" agency as well as the agency for study of the fill moratorium. The assembly endorsed this stand, which requires executive committee approval for amendment to the association by-laws.

San Francisco was accepted into ABAG at yesterday's meeting.

83 Feared Lost On Airliner

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP)—A British airliner with 83 persons aboard failed to make a scheduled landing here today because of fog. The Austrian Press Agency said it is believed to have crashed within a 30-mile radius of 7,373-foot Mt. Patschkerkofel, five miles southeast of here.

German and Austrian rescue teams launched a search.

Most of the 75 passengers aboard were described as tourists. The plane carried a crew of 8.

The British Civil Aviation Ministry said the plane was a four-engine turboprop Britannia of the British Eagle Airlines.

Glenn Must Stay In Hospital For Now

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Lt. Col. John H. Glenn Jr. must remain in the hospital for the time being to recover from a brain concussion, his physicians said today.

The decision thus may cancel the astronaut's retirement from the Marine Corps until April 1, and postpone the start of his senatorial campaign.

Little Rain Falls, May Be More

A little rain fell on Marin County yesterday and more was possible tonight.

Only a trace was recorded in San Rafael, and the most recorded was only .05 of an inch at Point Reyes Station, Woodacre and Mill Valley. Sausalito had .04 and San Anselmo .03. Novato had only a trace.

In the face of clear skies at noon today, the Weather Bureau made the forecast of a chance of rain tonight.

Wilson said he would expect the attorneys to begin arguing their cases Monday, the start of the trial's seventh week.

Storm Whips Atlantic Coast

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

A wind-whipped snowstorm pelted the Atlantic Coast today, and the U.S. Weather Bureau issued heavy snow warnings for four northeastern states as February came to a wintry end.

Heavy snow alerts were in effect for eastern Maryland, Delaware, southern New Jersey and southeastern Pennsylvania.

Ten inches of snow fell in Frederick County in Maryland, where three persons were killed in a car-truck collision on snow-slick U.S. 340 yesterday. Four inches fell in Baltimore and five inches in western Maryland.

In New England, Connecticut received almost two inches of snow, and other parts of the state lay under four inches.

Paper Tells Plot Against Johnson

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tip that a Cuban suicide pilot might try to ram President Lyndon B. Johnson's jet transport reportedly was the reason for the wartime-type security surrounding the chief executive's Florida trip this week.

Neither the White House nor the Secret Service would comment on the report, published last night by The Miami Herald. Johnson was almost certain to be asked about the matter at his news conference today.

Without question, the security measures imposed during Johnson's 16-hour Florida visit suggested there was official concern about the safety of the president while in the air.

The Herald said the Secret Service had received a tip, apparently about a week ago, that a suicide pilot might try to ram Johnson's plane or that a Cuba-based missile might be aimed at the big jet.

According to the newspaper, the Secret Service considered these possibilities highly unlikely. However, it was said that officials decided to take no chances.

U.N. Readies Peace Force Plan For Embattled Cyprus

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) —U.N. Security Council members readied a call for an international peace force for embattled Cyprus today as Greece warned Turkey that military intervention would mean war.

Five non-permanent members of the 11-nation council planned to submit the peace-force plea to U.N. officials this afternoon so it can be put before a council meeting Monday in an effort to settle the growing crisis.

The resolution of Bolivia, Brazil, Morocco, Norway and the Ivory Coast also calls for a mediator to attack the heart of the emergency—the bitter communal strife among Greek and Turkish Cypriots that has heightened tension between their mother countries.

Informants in Athens said yesterday the Greek government had put its military forces on a tightened alert and warned of retaliation if Turkey carries out a threat to invade the east Mediterranean island to protect the lives and rights of the Turkish Cypriot minority.

Signer Invalid In Sausalito

One of the five signers for Sausalito council candidate Thomas Gene Siddle has been declared invalid, thus cutting the field of 10 candidates to nine.

Deputy City Clerk Wilma Young reports that M. J. Streiboro, 5 Lower Crescent, is not a registered voter and therefore Siddle's nomination papers have but four valid signatures. Five are required.

Siddle who lives at 50 Bulkley Avenue, operates the Cat and Fiddle at 681 Bridgeway. He gave his occupation as innkeeper on his nomination papers.

White House Backs Brown On Delegation

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The White House is backing Gov. Edmund G. Brown in his prospective contest with Mayor Samuel W. Yorty of Los Angeles over rival pro-Johnson delegations in California's presidential primary.

The endorsement came from Kenneth O'Donnell, assistant to Johnson, in a telephone interview with Associated Press.

"There's no question about it," he said. "The president is looking to Governor Brown as his leader in California.

"All of us here expect the governor and other Democratic leaders to put together the delegation.

"That's the slate we feel would represent the Democratic Party in California."

The statement had the effect of designating Brown's group as the "official" delegation in the June 2 primary.

The governor, who headed a favorite son delegation to the Los Angeles convention in 1960, is now in process of picking 314 members for the trip to Atlantic City in August.

Chi'in Shi Huang Ti, who united China in the third century B.C., linked together the existing walled towns of China's north and thus built the main part of the Great Wall.

Beef Import Protest Snags Cotton Measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Angry protests against beef and meat imports plus a shower of amendments cloud plans of Senate leaders for quick passage of an election-year cotton-wheat bill.

Seven hours of debate and discussion, with only a few senators participating, failed to produce any voting or decisions during a long session yesterday.

Still hoping to wrap up the bill Wednesday, Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield asked the Senate to resume debate an hour early Monday.

Mansfield plans to open the battle over the House-passed civil rights bill as soon as the complex farm measure is out of the way.

And because farmers want to know details about federal programs before they do spring planting, already under way in some Southern areas, there is strong pressure for Senate action.

Theft of a 24-foot aluminum ladder was reported to San Rafael police today by D. G. Weddell, 58 Coleman Drive, San Rafael. He told officers the ladder, valued at $33, was taken from a garage at 1223 Grand Avenue between 4:30 p.m. yesterday and 8:30 a.m. today.

Mill Valley Boys Arrested After 110-MPH Chase

Three Mill Valley juveniles were arrested last night following a automobile chase which reached 110 miles an hour, drove several motorists off the road, and required city, county and state police to finally halt the speeders on Highway 101 at the Cotati interchange in Sonoma County.

The trio, two 16-year-old juniors at Tamalpais High School, and a 14-year-old student at Edna McGuire School, Mill Valley, were in Marin County Juvenile Hall today. All allegedly had been drinking. San Rafael police said the driver, 16, faces 17 charges for violating traffic laws and resisting arrest.

San Rafael Patrolman Phil Green and Reserve Officer Lindy Roson spotted the car speeding at Fourth Street and Tamalpais Avenue about 10 p.m. and halted them. Patrolman Green said they fled before he could cite them, and he gave chase.

The trio finally was boxed in by California Highway Patrol cars about 35 miles from the start of the chase, according to Patrolman Green.

Crowd Pays Tribute To McCarthy, Bagley

By WAT TAKESHITA

A crowd of 500 jammed Dominic's Harbor Restaurant in San Rafael last night to pay tribute to State Senate Minority Leader John F. McCarthy and Assemblyman William T. Bagley, Republican legislators from San Rafael who seek reelection this year.

More than 40 congratulatory telegrams, including those from Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel and Rep. Don H. Clausen (R-Crescent City) added to the enthusiasm of the crowd. Rockefeller's message described McCarthy and Bagley as "two of California's finest legislators."

Sen. McCarthy said there will be no complacency in his campaign this year for his sixth term in the State Senate. "I will wage war on my opponent," he declared. "I will flight hard and I ask your assistance."

Without mentioning his opponent's name, he was referring to Democrat Vera Schultz of Mill Valley.

McCarthy was introduced by Caspar W. Weinberger, chairman of the State Republican Central Committee. Weinberger said the key to McCarthy's "extraordinary effectiveness in the Senate" is his courage to stand up for his convictions and fight.

"Your deep admiration and justified respect for Senator McCarthy is shared by Republicans all over the state," Weinberger told the applauding audience.

Assemblyman Bagley called for consistent action in the fields of freedom in business, political freedom without "a boss system as epitomized by Big Daddy Unruh," and human rights.

"His courage, his ability to needle the opposition plays a most important part on our team," said Mulford.

Gerald E. Misner, chairman of the Marin County Republican Central Committee, was master of ceremonies. He presented McCarthy and Bagley with silver trays "in appreciation for your outstanding public service." Misner said the gifts were from the citizens of Marin who back the two legislators.

Both Weinberger and Mulford stressed the importance of party unity and called on all Republicans to close ranks after the Republican National Convention in San Francisco in July. The key to victory, said Weinberger, is for Republicans to get an 80 to 85 per cent voter turnout.

Mulford appealed for the "American tradition of fair play." After the primary contest is over, said Mulford, Republicans should "shake hands and join together," regardless of their personal preferences right now.

Joseph Martin Jr., California Republican national committeeman, could not attend the dinner last night. Misner explained Martin had accidentally hurt his arm yesterday.

GILMORE

who previously had to share an apartment, now had one of her own with refrigerator and television. House building was going forward at a rapid rate.

Khrushchev, according to Gilmore, says every Russian will have at least a private room by 1965.

Frilly panties $2.75 to $16.50, a man's suit $77 to $141, a good grade of overcoat $265, lemons 35 cents each, butter $1.80 a pound, and eggs $1.71 a dozen.

He noted that vodka drinking is no longer the "cultured" thing to do: Armenian cognac is now in vogue.

Gilmore said the average Russian today believes the Red Chinese are war mongers and has nothing but contempt for the Chinese effort to get a nuclear bomb.

The correspondent sees no need to worry too much about Khrushchev's successor. He thinks the odds are the successor will be more opposed to Stalinism than Khrushchev and less dangerous to the West.

"A struggle for power is almost sure to take place. It will be even more bitter because Communists outside Russia will be participating," Gilmore predicted.

Judge Wilson ruled the water line is a "shifting line" and maintained the state has not proved exactly where it is right now, therefore the fence can't be moved.

Bryan R. McCarthy, attorney for Kent, said the line is a slowly changing thing and it may take 40 years to determine a precise high water line.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Thomas T. Storer and Deputy Atty. Gen. Ralph W. Scott alleged the high water mark is the boundary line, and if the line shifts, the public's right shifts with it.

But the fence stays up and the public may use the beach below the high water mark, so attorneys for both side said they pretty much got what they wanted.

Leap-Year Child Collects Prizes

Pierre-Francesco Parisi who arrived at Marin General Hospital at 12:40 a.m. today may be slighted on the number of birthdays in the future, but he and his parents made a haul today.

The third child of Guino and Ann Parisi of Bolinas, the nine-pound, six ounce boy was the first to arrive in Marin on Leap Year Day. He and his parents collected prizes from merchants throughout the county in a contest sponsored by Radio Station KTIM.

PLANE

a vacancy as assistant secretary of the army.

Mrs. Frankie M. Freeman of St. Louis, Johnson said, has been named the the Civil Rights Commission.

The first question after Johnson's prepared announcements was whether Johnson would confirm reports that special security measures were taken during his Florida trip because of a warning that there might be an attempt by a suicide pilot to ram his plane.

"I don't handle my own security," Johnson replied. He said he was informed there were reasons for taking additional precautions and he directed that the matter be handled by FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover and the Secret Service. He said their suggestions were followed.

The chief executive said he was deeply impressed by how people closed ranks and were anxious to unite the country after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy in November.

He said he has been lavishly praised and criticized but thinks the American nation was conducted itself well in a crisis.

On other points raised in the question session, Johnson had these comments:

Panama — He hopes agreement can be reached as early as possible. He said the 1903 treaty on the Canal Zone has been modified from time to time, and that possibly the situation will require "adjustment". But he said "we are not going to make any pre-commitments."

Vietnam — Johnson said he has asked Defense Secretary McNamara to go there in the next few days, have conferences and bring back valuable information.

Laos — The United States has protested violations of the Geneva agreement by the Pathet Laos in Laos, Johnson said. This was the reply to a question whether this country now thinks that, because of the activity of the faction, neutralization is no longer the proper policy for the southeastern Asian country.

Cyprus — Said "we are deeply concerned, we think it is a very serious situation. . . ."

Nixon — Asked about speculation that he expects to run against former Vice President Richard M. Nixon as the Republican candidate, Johnson said he has not speculated "on whether I'll run or even who 'I'll run against if I do run'."

Lodge — Johnson rejected the idea that the position of Henry Cabot Lodge as ambassador in South Vietnam and as a possible Republican contender for the presidency makes U.S. policy "awkward."

Cuba — Johnson said he was informed Friday the Commerce Department was considering adding lard to the list of commodities to be barred from sale to Cuba.

Bobby Baker — Asked how he appraised the possible political impact of the Bobby Baker case Johnson said it is a matter for the Senate to consider.

"I'm sure they'll take the proper action," he said.

Civil rights — Johnson said he has never discussed with anyone any proposal to compromise on the public accommodations section of the civil rights bill now pending in the Senate.

San Jose District Vote

Residents of the San Jose Elementary School District will vote Tuesday on a $275,000 bond issue and $1,184,000 state loan authorization.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. at the Lynwood, Loma Verde, Pacheco and Meadow Park Schools.

Both propositions require a two-thirds majority to pass.

The bond issue is necessary to bring the district up to its bonding capacity. It would then be eligible to borrow the other amount from the state, if both measures pass, explained Supt. Ralph Giovaniello.

"Passage of both measures is necessary if the school disrict is to keep up with the expected growth during the next two years when 25 additional classrooms will be needed," Giovanniello said.

Transportation for anyone needing it to the polls will be furnished by the Parent-Teacher Assns.

MARIN'S SOCIAL WHIRL

New Daughter-in-Law Feted At Luncheon, Bridge Party

By FLORENCE DONNELLY

Mrs. Henry Skinner of Ross is entertaining at a luncheon and bridge party today at the Meadow Club honoring her new daughter-in-law, Mrs. Jeffrey Skinner, the former Martha Ruth (Mardi) Dickson and her mother, Mrs. Owen Dickson of Berkeley. Attending the party are 70 guests, among these is Mardi's aunt, Mrs. Jackson Lusk of El Cerrito.

The newlyweds are living in Berkeley. Mardi is a sophomore at the University of California and is a member of Delta Gamma sorority. She is a graduate of Anna Head School and studied in Germany on an American Field Service Scholarship.

Jeffrey, who will be graduated from Cal in June, will attend law school. He and Mardi were married earlier this month at the Grand Lake Lutheran Church in Oakland. The wedding reception was held at the home of Mardi's parents. Jeffrey was president of his fraternity, Zeta Psi.

DR. AND MRS. PERRY A. BONAR, who were married February 22 in Carson City are now on a honeymoon trip. The bride, the former Mrs. Rita Gayle Beller of Ross, is the mother of Mrs. Laurence Le Tourneau of Marinwood. Dr. Bonar, whose home is in Bayside Acres, is a well known M.D., now retired. He and his wife will divide their time between the Bayside Acres home and Dr. Bonar's house in Petrolia on the Metole River, a hunting and fishing "paradise" not far from Garberville. He has two sisters, Mrs. William W. Cole of Ross, and Mrs. H. Stephen Chase of San Francisco.

HORACE F. CAGWIN of Mill Valley claimed Mrs. Gladys W. Cowell as his bride February 12 at St. Peter's (Episcopal) Church in Carson City, Nevada. The marriage was announced by the bride's mother, Mrs. William C. Winkel of Mill Valley, formerly of Cleveland, Ohio. The church, where the couple exchanged nuptial vows, has a particular sentimental interest to the Cagwin family as the bridegroom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Copeland Dorsey were married there more than a hundred years ago and his mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Cagwin, exchanged nuptial vows in the same church.

The bridegroom, a realtor, served on the Mill Valley school board and is a past master of Mill Valley Masonic Lodge. He is the father of four, Louisa Dorsey Cagwin, Barbara June Cagwin and Cynthia Ellen Cagwin of Mill Valley and George M. Cagwin of San Rafael. The bridegroom has two sisters, Mrs. Adolph L. Costa of Kentfield, formerly of San Anselmo, and Mrs. John Lee Beach of Carmel. The newlyweds, who will continue to live in Mill Valley, spent their honeymoon in Nevada and at Lake Tahoe.

MR. AND MRS. EUGENE CHASE who recently came to Marin County from Stamford, Connecticut entertained at a cocktail party and dinner a week ago tonight. Mr. and Mrs. Chase, who have an apartment in the Belvedere Riviera Apartment in the Marinero Section, are the parents of a daughter, Kimberly, 6, and son, Eugene Chase Jr., who is four years old. Guests at the party of Mr. and Mrs. Chase were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Breen of San Anselmo, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Swapp of Pacifica and Mr. and Mrs. William Kelley of San Bruno.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN BARNES of Belvedere are vacationing in Mexico. They flew to Mexico City, went to Taxco, and will include Mazatlan, Cuernevaca and Puerto Vallarta on their trip.

At home with the Barnes children, Rachel and John, is Mrs. Barnes's mother, Mrs. Mary Barnes of Belvedere.

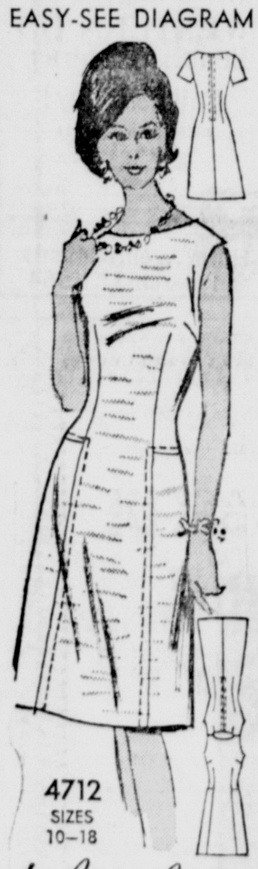

MR. AND MRS. AL BIRICH and their three children, daughter, Dima and twin sons, Gregory and Brandon, have moved to a new home overlooking the bay in Tiburon. They have sold their Hill Haven, Tiburon, home to Mr. and Mrs. Paul Westernoff of Belvedere.

Activity Helps Heart

Add to the evidence that exercise forestalls heart trouble: a four-year study of 3,300 residents of Evans County, Ga.

Drs. Curtis G. Hames and John R. McDonough found that the upper social status group showed the highest ratio of coronary diseases—and performed the least physical work. Conversely, the group most active physically, sharecroppers and laborers, showed the lowest. (UPI)

NEW YORK (UPI) — Along with luster and size, a pearl's surface and shape affect its market value. A relatively smooth surface and perfectly round shape add to price, although most pearls, being natural products, have slight imperfections.

Triple C To Hear Associate Pastor

REV. JACK BARTLETT

The Rev. Jack Bartlett, new associate minister of the Mill Valley Community Church, and his wife, Faith Whiting Bartlett, will be guests of honor at Wednesday's luncheon meeting of the Community Church Club.

It will be held at 12:30 p.m. in the parish hall.

The Bartletts were married in the church on May 4, 1963.

For the program the Rev. Bartlett will discuss "The California Migrant Ministry," with which he was affiliated before coming to Mill Valley. For the past four years he did community organization work in a Negro community of seasonal farm workers south of Bakersfield while he was with the Kern County farm ministry of the United Church of Christ and the California Migrant Ministry.

A native of Binghamton, N. Y., the new associate minister was graduated from Wharton School of Finance and Commerce of the University of Pennsylvania with a B.S. degree in economics. Then following three years in management training with the J. C. Penney Company he entered the Pacific School of Religion, where he was graduated in 1956 with a B.D. Degree.

In March, 1960, he was ordained as a minister of the United Church of Christ in services held in the Mill Valley Community Church.

A native of Berkshire, Mass., Mrs. Bartlett is a graduate of Bates College in Lewiston, Me., with a degree in nursing. She has worked in pediatric nursing at the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center in New York City, at the Boston Children's Hospital in Boston and at the Stanford Medical Center in Palo Alto.

SEW SIMPLE

By EUNICE FARMER

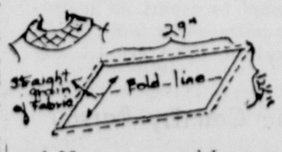

"Knowing how important it is to keep the 'straight of goods' arrows on your pattern even with the grain line of material, why is such a short line marked on the pattern?" Mrs. W. A. G.

Dear Mrs. W. A. G.:

The first sewing teacher I ever went to had a great idea for this very thing and I find myself doing this automatically today. After removing the pattern from the envelope, take a yardstick and continue the arrow on the pattern from one end to the other with a crayon. She also suggested making a circle with crayon around each word "fold" on your pattern so that you wouldn't slip up and cut these pieces on the selvage instead of the fold.

"As I was browsing through the accessory department recently I saw some chiffon and silk scarfs that were called 'Smoke Rings.' They cost $5 and $6 or more and I am wondering if I can make one?"

Mrs. M. A. A.

Dear Mrs. M. A. A.:

A smoke ring is a very attractive accessory that should be made out of a soft fabric such as silk or chiffon. It could be a print which would really perk up your suit or dress.

Follow the sketch for cutting instructions, the size could vary. After cutting, fold the length of the scarf (right side inside) and machine stitch to within two inches of each of the short ends. Trim the seam allowance to one-fourth inch and turn right side out. Pin the two ends together and machine stitch. Press this seam open. The last step is to slip-stitch the edge of the scarf that was left open. A smoke ring is to be worn casually, with or without a decorative pin to hold in place.

"My mother was a designer and dressmaker all her life. I learned many things just watching her. This was one of the most valuable, and I hope will help others. If you should stick your finger (and who doesn't), and get a drop of blood on your garment, just wad up some thread, about the size of a pea, and put it in your mouth. When it is wet through, rub the bloody spot. It will remove all traces and never leave a mark. Water won't work as well, the chemical reaction of your own saliva on your own blood is what does the trick."

Hard To See How Paper Can Be Called Monopoly

That is a question that I-J people hear occasionally. It is asked by persons who view the I-J as a monopoly and resent it.

A more realistic question would be, "Is the I-J a monopoly?" or "Can any newspaper become a monopoly in this day and age?"

There was a time back before World War II when communities weren't so highly "organizationalized." When a fellow came home from work, there was little demand for his time at various evening meetings of organizations for this or that purpose.

He could plop into his favorite chair and spend the evening reading, starting with the evening paper, and perhaps listening to a radio program or two.

But that was long ago.

Now the telephone rings with an invitation to attend a neighborhood meeting to protest something or other before the planning commission, the school board or other agency.

Meetings, meetings, meetings.

Whoever gets to stay home and read anymore?

When you do get to stay home, there is television. It is a serious competitor for reading time. It probably accounts in large part for the serious decline in circulation and readership of national magazines in the U.S.A.

TAKE A LOOK at the advertising dollar.

Newspapers got the lion's share of national advertising money back in the 1920s before radio cut in. Magazines and billboards got some, but mostly it was spent with newspapers.

Radio took a big chunk of it away from newspapers in the late 20s and early 1930s. Television just about finished the job in the late 1940s and early 50s.

Newspapers still get some national advertising and the advertisers get results from newspaper advertising, but the glamor of the "idiot box" seems to have more influence on some advertisers than do the solid facts on which newspapers depend to carry their sales pitch.

THE COMPETITION for local advertising dollars is stiff.

Real estate offices of Marin spend more money advertising in San Francisco newspaper classified sections than they spend in the I-J, despite real estate sales statistics showing that the majority of buyers are already residents of Marin when they buy here.

But the large San Francisco newspapers with infinitely greater resources than the I-J are able to field sales forces here in Marin which more than offset the hard facts on which the I-J must largely depend.

Radio and TV pick up a part of the total Marin advertising dollar, as you know if you pay any attention to Bay Area radio or TV commercials.

More than half a dozen weekly newspapers and some shopping news throwaways are produced in Marin; all have advertising salesmen selling with varying degrees of success in competition with the I-J.

A NEWSPAPER CANNOT get appreciable gains in circulation without an active circulation sales effort.

The I-J depends largely on its 600-plus newspaperboys. The resources of the large San Francisco newspapers enable them to field sizeable forces of "old pro" solicitors and it has been their custom in the past few years to try to outdo each other with give-aways.

All this constitutes competition for the I-J.

IS THE I-J COMPLAINING about the competition?

NO. It is healthy. It keeps us on our toes. The people of the county probably profit a bit from this.

Competition hasn't hurt the I-J. It probably has made it necessary for the I-J to accelerate its schedule of improvements. Our readers enjoy the fruits of this result, too.

IN LIGHT OF THE facts, it is hardly justifiable to refer to the I-J as a monopoly.

But it is so regarded nonetheless.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUETS to the Sausalitans responsible for keeping alive that city's sister city relationship with Vina Del Mar, Chile. Sausalito now displays visible signs of observing the fourth anniversary of the sisterhood arrangement.

BRICKBATS to the driver of the Greyhound bus which picks up youngsters along Sir Francis Drake Blvd. some mornings, stopping his bus in a manner that leaves the rear end out in a driving lane, unnecessarily blocking traffic.

A BOUQUET (of the belated, overdue variety) to Dave Plant for his service as president of the Louise A. Boyd Natural Science Museum board. When he accepted the presidency, the organization was almost moribund. Under his leadership it was successfully rebuilt and reestablished. And our good wishes go also to his successor as president, Lothar Salin.

A BOUQUET to the Novato Chamber of Commerce for taking up cudgel to try to get something started toward curbing juvenile delinquency. May their efforts produce good results.

A BRICKBAT to each and every establishment in Marin with a banquet room with a faulty public address system. In this day of advanced electronics, there isn't any acceptable reason for a P.A. system to malfunction. It must be that the management just doesn't care enough to have it working properly.

BOUQUETS to the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce for seeming to come to life over the off-street parking problem in San Rafael. We aren't sure anymore whether double-decking present city parking lots is the final, best answer, but we are glad to see the chamber of commerce come forth and make itself heard again on this problem after what seemed like a long silence.

SOLDIER PUT HIS COMPASSION TO WORK

An army sergeant sent a $1,000 gift halfway around the world to widows and orphans of soldiers of India who had been killed in the border war with Communist China.

The GI, stationed in Fort Riley, Kan., explained that he was making his gift "for the love of God" and because he was "tired of hearing about people being pushed around."

Compassion for others is the mark of the true Christ-bearer. It is a response to the need of our fellow men that is based not on some vague desire to help, but on a conviction that flows into action.

Nothing is easier than to delude ourselves that merely wishing to be of service is sufficient to improve a situation.

Good intentions are not good enough unless they are carried out—and this usually means hard work, perseverance and sometimes suffering.

Especially today, when so many millions, both at home and abroad, are in desperate need, an active compassion is needed.

"Beloved, let us love on another, for love is from God." (1 John 4:7)

May I talk less, O Holy Spirit, about what should be done for the world, and do more about helping it.

Cartoon Despicable; I-J Too Disgusting

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I have just read your "The Cynic's Corner" by Interlandi and I just wish I had never picked up your newspaper. I was looking in it for things about the late President Kennedy, otherwise I wouldn't have been reading it, as I never do.

Since the tragedy has happened I have not heard or known of a joke or some such thing that was inappropriate until now. It was just too stupid and insensitive. I think it is thoroughly disgusting and despicable. I have never thought much of your newspaper, one reason being your dealing with San Rafael High School and its students, which is only one, but now this just proves to me what a lousy and insincere thing you put out for people to read. I cannot understand such a thing and I just wish I could express anywhere accurately my feelings. I'm sorry for you. It's too disgusting.

U.N Organization Not Democratic

Editor, Independent-Journal:

In re: Nora Moeller, letter to editor of Feb. 15, on the U. N., quote: "It aims toward the establishment of a world of independent nations free from the domination of any one power or bloc. . . ."

Secretary of State Dean Rusk in his speech at Columbia University, read by Harlan Cleveland, assistant secretary of state, said that it is now theoretically possible that a two-thirds majority in the General Assembly could be formed by nations with only 10 per cent of the world's population or by another group of nations which contribute only five per cent of the assessed U. N. budget. Mr. Rusk also said "he had no final answer" but believed "wide and careful consultations about the problem should be taken throughout the world community."

Gas Prices Higher Because It's Marin

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I have pondered your lead editorial of Tuesday, Feb. 18, for some days.

It is incredible that a newspaper, engaged in business for a profit, does not recognize the effects of supply and demand, and competition on prices of anything, including gasoline.

In the first place, Marin County is not a densely populated area compared with Contra Costa, San Francisco, Los Angeles or the other places mentioned in the editorial.

Generally, dealers in gasoline set their own prices to the consumer, and must set their profit margin high enough to return a profit after paying their supplier, wages, taxes and rent, not to mention utilities.

Where cheap land is available, with consequent low rent, a dealer can set a low price and make sufficient profit to prosper if there are enough potential customers to buy his product. Actually, the prices paid by dealers in Richmond and Marin differ little, if any.

However, there is no cheap land in Marin—and even if available, it is virtually impossible to get use permits or zoning for service station use, so the factor of competition is eliminated, or at least greatly curtailed.

I wonder why gasoline was selected for your attack. Marin enjoys high prices on almost all commodities, including real estate. It is the price of scarcity. If you want cheap gasoline, or cheap anything, simply remove the restrictions on the supply, and prices will naturally fall.

However, I can not believe seriously that you would advocate turning the highways of Marin into the neon jungles and shabby commercial areas of Los Angeles or Richmond, so the higher prices paid here are simply the cost of being selective about a place to live.

More Power To Elks For Their Selectivity

Editor, Independent-Journal:

More power to the advisory board of the Elks. I am very happy to know that they are on their toes and are very selective of the membership.

I could say to the Independent-Journal that it is none of the paper's business whom we select or reject. This is not a public body and answerable to the general public.

First of all, the Elks are a body of men who are conscious of a Supreme Being and also interested in the welfare of their country, the United States. These are our first requirements to become an Elk.

If your paper has any objections to these precepts, then come out from your smoke screen and confess.

Passage Of Bonds Would Add To Park

Editor, Independent-Journal:

It is important to know that the State of California has not abandoned its interest in purchasing the Brazil Ranch as an extension of Tamalpais State Park. Your newspaper has used the word "abandoned" in recent articles with regard to the dropping of the condemnation suit.

Since lack of money is the only stumbling block to acquisition, everything depends on passage of Proposition One on the November ballot, the Beaches and Parks Bond issue. We can be almost certain that, if this bond issue passes, the Brazil Ranch will be among the first acquisitions.

Washington Sketches Lacking Respect

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I not only agree with Mr. George R. Smith (Feb. 25) that it is too bad that Washington's Birthday has become a Sellebration Day but I also feel that the caricatures of George Washington used in advertising sales for this day are lacking in respect and distasteful.

Will Tax Cut Lead To Inflation? It Isn't The Bill Kennedy Planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 11.5-billion-dollar income tax cut—largest in history—has now become law with the blessing of two presidents and both houses of Congress. It is based on hope and faith.

The hope is that individuals and corporations, with more money to spend, will now spend it and in this way boost the economy and cut down unemployment.

People will be able to spend more. And business, with more money to invest to supply the demand, will expand plants and production.

BUT THE patient may begin to develop anemia—thus defeating the very purpose of the tax cut—if, through hunger for a buck, inflation raises the cost of everything.

For example:

If business, seeing customers with more money to spend, raises prices and labor, either anxious for some of the loot or because it feels workers need even more money to keep up with prices, begins a broad demand for higher wages.

So, in addition to the hope the plan will work, this tax reduction is based on faith that Americans won't get greedy.

NOBODY HAS SAID it plainer than President Lyndon B. Johnson Wednesday night after signing the bill.

"This," he said, "is a bold approach to the problem of the American economy.

"We could have chosen to stimulate the economy through a higher level of government spending. Instead we chose tax reduction—and at the same time we reduced government spending.

"By taking this course we have made this bill an expression of faith in our system of free enterprise."

BUT THE tax bill Johnson signed was far different from the one President John F. Kennedy proposed to Congress on Jan. 24, 1963. In addition to tax cuts, he proposed a number of tax reforms.

The government is losing a lot of money now — although legally—through preferential treatment and special privileges given particular types of transactions, enterprises and taxpayers.

Kennedy figured his reforms, by stopping up loopholes and eliminating special privileges, would catch back for the government about 3.5 billion dollars in taxes it isn't getting now.

Sen. Paul Douglas, Illinois Democrat who fought mostly unsuccessfully last year to get Congress to reform the tax structure, gave examples of millionaires who paid no taxes.

THE TREASURY Department gave him 1960 data on a number of oil operators.

Douglas wasn't suggesting any illegality. But the examples he gave indicated the operators had lawyers and accountants who took advantage, legally, of all the loopholes and privileges.

Here are three of the examples Douglas cited:

One operator, with income of 28.7 million dollars, didn't pay a dime in federal taxes; neither did another with 4 million dollars income; and neither did another with 1.5 million dollars income.

But Congress, while it made some changes in the tax structure, balked at any wholesale reforms.

Johnson Faces Cuba Threat To Venezuela

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press International

IN THE MATTER of Fidel Castro's effort to seize Venezuela, it would appear that the next move is up to President Lyndon B. Johnson.

The OAS reported this week on Castro's Operation Venezuela. OAS is the Organization of American States. OAS investigators reported Castro's agents smuggled bazookas, mortars and machine guns into Venezuela. Object: Seizure of the country.

This invites attention to the ground rules laid down by the late President John F. Kennedy at his Sept. 13, 1962, news conference. The president was trying to silence rumors that Castro was becoming more of a menace to the United States and its neighbors.

Kennedy said military action by the United States was neither required nor would it be justified by the then existing situation. But the president added this:

"But, let me make this clear once again: If at any time the Communist build-up in Cuba were to:

"Endanger or interfere with our security in any way, including our base at Guantanamo.

"Our passage to the Panama Canal;

"Or the lives of American citizens in this country;

"Or if Cuba should ever attempt to export its aggressive purposes by force or the threat of force against any nation in this hemisphere;

"Or become an offensive military base of significant capacity for the Soviet Union;

"THEN this country will do whatever must be done to protect its own security and that of its allies."

These bold words were uttered at a time when Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) was demanding that the administration act to remove the threat of Soviet armed might in this hemisphere. Richard M. Nixon demanded a U. S. naval blockade if necessary.

FIVE WEEKS later on the eve of the congressional elections there was a national clamor for action to check the Sino-Russian penetration of the Western Hemisphere.

The Kennedy administration discovered the Russian missile buildup on Oct. 23 and imposed a naval blockade despite Russian threats of an A-war. On the basis of the OAS report of Castro's Operation Venezuela, that big issue is arising again.

REMEMBER WHEN?

20 YEARS AGO

"Marinship Launches Campaign to Recruit 350 Experienced Craftsmen," said an 8-column headline in the Independent.

Plans were completed for Marin's first camellia show in the First National Bank of San Rafael.

At request of the Office of Defense Transportation, the California Federation of Women's Clubs cancelled its annual convention for the first time in its history.

Postmaster C. H. Hayden of San Rafael announced local mail would rise from two cents to three cents, the rate for all other domestic mail, March 26.

Fourteen enumerators planned to begin a wartime census of Marin County to determine quotas for food supplies and other rationed items.

Cyprus—Island Of Love Armed

By RICHARD F. NEWCOMB
A. P. Newsfeatures Writer

Cyprus, the Isle of Love, birthplace of Aphrodite.

Cyprus, which Antony once gave to Cleopatra.

Cyprus, where only last August Lyndon B. Johnson danced in the streets of the capital city of Nicosia, while maidens sprinkled him with flower petals.

Now the eyes of the Western world are fixed on Cyprus, third largest island in the Mediterranean (after Sicily and Sardinia). Men and boys go heavily armed, dozens have been killed in communal strife, villages have been pillaged and burned and the island seethes with unrest. It could explode at any time.

Nationalism is the key. Four-fifths of the half-million islanders are of Greek origin, the other fifth Turkish. Greek-Turkish hatreds, nurtured here for decades, are passed from father to son and taught to children in separate Greek and Turkish school systems. Violent outbreaks are inevitable, and the latest began last Dec. 21, after which gunfire raged for 10 days. Following a short truce, the battles resumed in January and February, even as the strife reached the United Nations.

Britain, the last of many colonial rulers over the centuries, granted the island independence in 1960 under a treaty hopefully designed to keep the Greeks and Turks from each other's throats. Relative peace reigned until three months ago, when Archbishop Makarios, president of Cyprus, proposed changes in the constitution. Under the 1960 agreement, the Turkish Cypriots had been granted veto rights over foreign affairs and finances. Last year the Turks vetoed the budget. The Greek majority contended this was intolerable and called for changes in the Cyprus constitution. The Turks, fearing loss of rights, resisted and violence followed.

The Greeks, far stronger in both numbers and arms, grew cockier. "Let's finish off the Turks now," became a common phrase. The Turks, mostly huddled in cities within cities (22,000 in the Turk section of Nicosia, which has 80,000 population), called for partition, with the Turks getting the northern part of the island and the Greeks the southern. Greek Cypriots will not agree to this and instead called for a United Nations force to keep order.

Under the 1960 agreement, Britain, Greece and Turkey may intervene in Cyprus to protect their interests. All three have done so. Britain, which has nuclear bomb bases on the southern shores of the island, has beefed up its strength there to about 10,000 troops, seeking to maintain order. These soldiers, hopelessly outnumbered, are in the unenviable position of referees in a blood feud. Greece wants a United Nations peace force stationed in the island until tempers subside. The Turks oppose this, saying the Soviet Union would then enter the picture. The Turks contend at least one-third of the Greek Cypriots have Communist connections. The Turks called Cyprus "the Cuba of the Mediterranean."

Meantime, arms are at the ready, on both sides, not only in the main cities of Nicosia, Famagusta, Larnaca, Limassol and Kyrenia, but also in more than 100 small communities where there are both Greek and Turkish settlements. Road blocks, sand bags and gun ports are common sights. In many places the Turks say they are afraid to leave their quarters in the city, or their homes in the country to go work in the fields.

The island, mentioned in history back to 4,000 B.C., is an archeological treasure house, with Aphrodite temples, Gothic churches, Roman forums, mosques and monasteries. It is also one of the most fought-over areas of the world. Since the Phoenicians settled it in 800 B.C. it has been ruled by Assyrians, Egyptians, Persians, Romans, Greeks, Turks, and British, to name a few. The Apostle Paul introduced Christianity here, and Richard the Lion-Hearted once conquered it on one of the Crusades. Illiteracy is still 40 per cent, but the land is rich in grain, vegetables, fruits and cattle. The mines produce iron, asbestos and chromite, and still some copper, which in antiquity took its name from Cyprus.

"Wednesdays and Saturdays are hunting days you know." They mean for animals.

State Is Bothered By Growth Of Suburban Liquor Licenses

SACRAMENTO (CNS)—The knotty problem of issuing liquor licenses in the fast-growing suburban areas of California will come under study in Sacramento March 17 when the department of alcoholic beverage control holds a hearing on eight proposed changes in its rules.

Actually, the rule changes would cover all of the state but it is in the suburban areas, with their rash of shopping centers, that the licensing problem is most acute.

Every time a new shopping center is built, a grocery super market and usually a chain drug store is included. They want liquor licenses. Existing package stores in the general area don't feel they should have licenses if the county's quota has been reached. In many cases, issuance of a license to a big super market or drug store will put the little liquor store man out of business.

The department has a rule and law to go by which prohibit the issuance of a new license within 200 feet of a premises with the same type of licence. There have been some exceptions to this law, with the result that the department has no fixed standards and each application for a license now becomes an individual case.

One of the proposed new rules, 64.2 would define public demand. Some applicants have presented cases for a new license on the basis that there is a need in the neighborhood for one-stop shopping for groceries or drugs and liquors. Others have contended there is a demand for the lower-priced private label brands that only their chain carries.

Malcolm E. Harris, ABC director, said he hoped adoption of the rule would provide a more definite standard on which to base the various applications.

Another rule along somewhat the same line would establish a presumption of undue concentration where five or more licenses are located within 600 feet of a proposed premises. Such undue concentration would be grounds for denial of a license. The new rule would not apply to proposed bona fide public eating places.

Another rule change concerns a 1963 law which limits to $6,000 the price tag for any license issued in 1961 or later. That is the amount of the original state fee. The rule would permit the department to require an appraisal of realty involved in a transfer. The department has had a case or two in which the price for real estate or equipment was felt to be considerably higher than it was worth.

Other proposed rule changes, largely technical in nature, will concern draft beer equipment which suppliers may install and service for retailers, departmental approval of signs, displays and advertising specialties provided by suppliers, sales by retail licensees who have discontinued business, and several others.

ROUGH GOING AHEAD

Johnson's First 100 Days —Considers Record Good

By MERRIMAN SMITH

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Born in violence and continued in controversy, President Lyndon B. Johnson's administration is 100 days old.

In retrospect, Johnson and his advisers consider the record good, considering the circumstances. Looking ahead, they foresee a rocky road leading to the November elections. But they are confident Johnson will win over any Republican put up against him.

Lyndon Baines Johnson succeeded to the presidency last Nov. 22 in Dallas, Tex., the date and place of John F. Kennedy's assassination.

Not since he took the oath of office that fateful afternoon at the Dallas airport has Johnson been free of international crisis. Each new flare-up seemed to beget another—Panama, the water line at Guantanamo Bay, Cyprus, Ghana, Zanzibar, Vietnam and new rumblings from Laos.

On the home front, Johnson seemed to fare better. There was what amounted to a moratorium on political criticism during the 30-day period of mourning for the fallen president. This period led into the Christmas holidays and for a time it appeared that Johnson was enjoying an extended political honeymoon.

Once Congress went back into session in January, however, the political floodgates opened and Johnson found himself on the receiving end of high-powered criticism, much of it from Republican presidential hopefuls.

Even with a mounting tide of election-year criticism, however, the administration tax bill moved swiftly through Congress. The House passed the civil rights bill. With much strenuous effort, Johnson also was able to soften substantially what at one time promised to be seriously deep slashes in foreign-aid money.

During the first 100 days, Johnson's areas of interest and concentrated activity had to shift constantly.

By the end of the first 100 days Johnson had conferred with West German Chancellor Ludwig Erhard, Italian President Antonio Segni, Canadian Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson, British Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home and President Adolfo Lopez Mateos of Mexico.

His most frequent cabinet conferees seemed to be the secretaries of state, defense and treasury. Johnson also restored the cabinet, as a deliberative body, to essentially a regular schedule of White House meetings. Kennedy held comparatively few cabinet meetings.

Despite his heavy work schedule, Johnson seemed to thrive on the presidency. There was a time—about the time of Panama and the Cuban water line crisis—when he appeared almost subdued. Externally, however, this period was brief. After three months on the job, he seemed to settle into a pace which kept him healthy and relaxed.

There was little evidence of his 1955 heart attack aside from a moderately restricted diet. For exercise and relaxation, he swam twice a day in the White House Pool.

Following is an appraisal of Johnson's record:

DOMESTIC POLICY

Once settled in the White House, Johnson's first major domestic chore was preparation of an administration legislative program for submission to Congress.

The new note added by Johnson was urgent frugality. He submitted a budget of 97.9 billion dollars for fiscal 1965, about 900 million dollars under what Kennedy had requested for fiscal 1964. He estimated the 1965 deficit at 4.9 billion dollars compared with the 10-billion-dollar deficit estimated for the current fiscal year.

His direction led his critics, and some of his friends, to suggest that he might be spreading himself too thin.

Believing he needed the greatest possible measure of public support, he held frequently but highly informal news conferences.

He devoted much time to the minutae of human relations — granting audiences to children who wrote appealing letters, talking to students about serious problems at home and abroad, telephoning a St. Louis policeman injured in a presidential procession through his city.

The pace of some of this more or less extracurricular activity began to subside, largely because Johnson found the time available for such matters shrinking rapidly.

One of his thorniest problems lay in pursuing policies and programs of Kennedy while still maintaining his own identity. He had to be careful about cutting the cost of government and offering new programs without seeming to reject or radically altering policies of the New Frontier.

He took a number of Kennedy proposals and lumped them together in what he called a declared "war on poverty."

Johnson's long experience in Congress showed itself in many ways, but perhaps more spectacularly in the way he and his Democratic leaders on Capitol Hill pried two key bills—Civil Rights and the tax cut—out of the House rules and Senate finance committees.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

It was in the field of foreign policy that Johnson seemed least poised and sure of himself.

Much of the State Department's machinery for working with the White House had to be overhauled. Procedures for funneling foreign policy information and recommendations to the president, which worked under Kennedy, did not fit Johnson.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk devised a system of sending Johnson every evening an edited down "news sheet" containing the main foreign policy developments of the day. This supplemented intelligence briefings.

One of Johnson's first ventures into foreign affairs was a brief chat in Washington with French President Charles de Gaulle during the week of Kennedy's funeral. Johnson invited de Gaulle back for a longer talk. De Gaulle replied, in effect, that this could be discussed through diplomatic channels.

Seasoned U.S. diplomats immediately interpreted this as a polite brush off. But Johnson thought de Gaulle had accepted and spread the word to newsmen. When the stories appeared no one was more surprised than de Gaulle. The French tactfully but firmly knocked down the report.

Despite such rough edges, senior U.S. diplomats credit Johnson with having acquired considerable knowledge of foreign affairs during his vice presidential years. When trouble exploded in far off Cyprus over an issue unknown to most Americans, Johnson was familiar with the basic problem because he had attended staff meetings which explored the probability of trouble.

One of the new president's biggest inherited problems was U.S. leadership in the free world. De Gaulle was making an end run around U.S. policies in Asia, recognizing Red China and encouraging neutralization in Vietnam.

Britain and other European nations were determined to continue, and probably increase, trade with Cuba.

Some U.S. officials privately have criticized Johnson's foreign policy tactics with the charge that he looks too much at what Congress will think and not enough at the world. They argue that this country would have relations with Panama today if the administration had not protested so hard against any Panama Canal "negotiations" because the label might be unpopular in this county.

POLITICS

Johnson has emerged from his break-in period with the stature of a potential political giant.

Public opinion polls have indicated that if the 1964 election were held now, he could defeat any Republican by a landslide.

But any such judgment may be premature. Johnson knows as well as anyone that his political luster can dim before next November.

A combination of factors contributed to his high political standing. After Kennedy's assassination, he had public sympathy in abundance and the Republican opposition observed a truce.

Political readings suggest Johnson has developed far more strength than he ever had in the Senate. It now reaches into the industrial states, where he appeared a feeble competitor against Kennedy when they were rivals for the Democratic presidential nomination four years ago. Johnson lacks some of Kennedy's handicaps in the South and the farm belt.

With Johnson the established Democratic candidate for president, his party is busy speculating about the vice presidential nominee. Those getting attention include the late president's brother, Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy and brother-in-law Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson and others.

Johnson's rating in the polls unnerved Republicans to the point that they welcomed the end of the political armistice. With memories of his artistry in Congress, they began labeling him a wheeler-dealer.

The GOP also has kept itself on the alert to capitalize on Johnson's past associations with Bobby Baker, the former senate employee whose outside business activities set off a Senate investigation.

Recent Republican attacks have concentrated on administration troubles abroad.

This Week In The World

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Words and action rooted in Ankara and Athens moved dangerously close this week to igniting the explosive Cyprus conflict.

Members of the Security Council of the United Nations worked feverishly on the drafting of a resolution designed to placate the warring Turkish and Greek factions on the Mediterranean island.

SMOULDERING SITUATION

Both Washington and London cast wary eyes on the smouldering situation. The United States recalled Ambassador Fraser Wilken for consultation. London hinted it may recall its Cyprus police force. The Soviet Union supported the Greek cause in the U.N. debate.

The gloomy picture was further darkened with the launching of a virulent anti-Western campaign in Nicosia in Greek-language newspapers. The newspaper stories appearing in the island's capital created concern about possible attacks on American and British residents of the strife-torn island. A U.S. official on the island said the newspaper accounts were "a virtual incitement to violence."

POSSIBILITY OF WAR

But the prospect of a war between Turkey and Greece was the most ominous of all developments. A powerful Turkish fleet with troops aboard was engaged in what Ankara called "maneuvers" about 80 miles north of Cyprus.

From Athens came a warning that any Turkish intervention in Cyprus could touch off a war in the eastern Mediterranean. A statement attributed to Greek Premier George Papandreou said ". . . if Turkey opens the door of the lunatic asylum and enters we shall do the same." As anti-American and anti-British feeling was rising among the Greek island population, the Soviet Union appeared to be gaining favor. An agreement creating an air link between Moscow and Nicosia was near completion.

AROUND-THE-WORLD, AROUND-THE-CLOCK

Washington—President Lyndon B. Johnson signed a 11.5-billion-dollar tax cut measure designed to bolster the U.S. economy.

New Orleans—The crash of an Eastern Air Line DC-8 jetliner in Lake Pontchartrain seven minutes after take-off from New Orleans Airport claimed 58 lives.

Washington—The Organization of American States charged Cuba of conducting a "policy of aggression" against Venezuela, specifically the shipment of arms to pro-Castro terrorists.

Vientiane, Laos — Pro-Communist troops seized a strategic highland area in supposedly neutralist Laos and U.S. officials in Washington reported that the number of North Vietnamese troops fighting with the Laotian Communists had increased.

London—The British government announced plans to build a fleet of five polaris submarines to bring its navy up to atomic-age capabilities.

Zanzibar Town—The U.S. and British governments granted recognition to the revolutionary government of Zanzibar with hopes of stemming any pro-Communist political buildup on the island off the coast of Tanganyika.

Tirana, Albania—The Albanian government seized Soviet embassy buildings in Tirana, the latest affront to Moscow since the two countries split in an ideological dispute in 1961.

Paris—Sung Chih-kuang, a charge d'affaire, arrived in the French capital to become Red China's first envoy to France.

Miami Beach — Cassius Clay wrested the world heavyweight boxing crown from Sonny Liston with a TKO in the seventh round.

Who Will Harvest State's Crops, Will They Stay?

SACRAMENTO (CNS)—The dean of the University of California school of agricultural said California farmers may bring 40,000 families into the state to supply labor requirements but it may have high social costs for local communities and the state.

Dr. Maurice L. Peterson, at a conference on Families Who Follow the Crops, said California would need substitutes for some 60,000 Mexican braceros who have worked as farm laborers in the state. The bracero program is scheduled to lapse on Dec. 31.

"A farmer's seasonal needs for labor are very largely dictated by the inherent nature of farm crops and the vagaries of weather," Peterson said. "He has little control once growth of a crop has started."

Peterson said there are two sources of supplemental labor to help fill the bracero gap. These are the "green-card" Mexicans, who come as immigrants, with their families, and unemployed persons from other states and Puerto Rico.

"Importations of Mexican immigrants and of domestic labor from other states or Puerto Rico are essentially the same," Peterson said. "All become potential residents of California. When the harvests are over, we can expect them to stay—with their families, with need for housing, need for school rooms and teachers, and need for income in the months before the next harvest."

MARIN BRIDGE

By JOE CASTRO

CASTRO

Last Sunday at the Edgewater Inn in Corte Madera the Marin Unit of the ACBL held its finest tournament of the new year. It was a mixed pair championship event and 80 players competed.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Ohmann of San Rafael came in second overall and this is a tribute to them and to their faith in the basic Charles Goren system. They are the only team I know of who play the simple (ha!) Goren System. Congratulations.

At the second table of the second session my partner and I came up against the Marin team that had the second best showing of all Marin teams. They came in fourth overall. The man turned to my partner and said: "How's this fella treating you?" The man's partner (one of my favorite LLOL's) turned to me and said: "Did you hear about the man who . . ."

NORTH
♠ Q 8 6 3
♥ A K 9 5
♦ 9 2
♣ K 7 2

WEST	EAST
♠ A J 7 2	♠ 9 5
♥ Q 10	♥ 8 6 3 2
♦ Q 8 5	♦ J 10 7 4 3
♣ Q J 6 3	♣ 10 5

SOUTH
♠ K 10 4
♥ J 7 4
♦ A K 6
♣ A 9 8 4

The bidding, North-South vulnerable:

1NT	P	2C	P
2D	P	3NT	All pass

Opening lead was the deuce of spades taken with the 10 in declarer's hand.

The fella played the heart four, covered with the 10 from West, taken with the ace. Mr. Fella now made a real good decision. He decided the hand was square overall so the 10 was an honest play from the queen, 10, doubleton.

HE NOW CASHED the heart K, dropping the queen. Four heart tricks were now home. Next he led the spade six from dummy and played the spade K, taken with West's ace. A small club was led back, taken by the ace in declarer's hand. The spade four was led as West played the seven and Mr. Fella again came up with the correct play and finessed the spade eight. He made five no-trump for an absolute top.

THE SECOND BOARD the fella and the LLOL bid to four hearts, the fella again played the hand and again made five for a tie for top. The third board was average, so out of a possible 24 points we received only four and one-half.

I was not smiling or laughing when I started to get up from the table. As I turned to leave I heart a faint voice say: "Joe," and I turned back. I saw a wink in her eye and a smile on her face as she said: "Don't forget about the man who . . ." The fella said: "Better luck next time, fella."

This woke me up to the fact that bridge is and always should be fun. I again smiled and knew in my heart that Mrs. Dororthy Brown of Kentfield and Ted Wolcott of San Anselmo are two of the finest players you could ever hope to meet at the bridge table, in more ways than one.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Feb. 29, the 60th day of 1964 with 306 to follow.

The moon is approaching its last quarter. The evening stars are Venus and Jupiter.

On this day in history:

In 1924, the former head of the Veteran's Bureau in Washington, D. C., Charles Forbes, was indicted for defrauding the government of 250 million dollars.

In 1956, President Dwight D. Eisenhower put an end to many months of speculation and announced he would run for another term.

In 1956, a federal court in Birmingham ordered the University of Alabama to reinstate Autherine Lucy, first Negro to enroll at the school. That same day, university trustees "permanently expelled"" her for making "outrageous, false and baseless accusations" against university officials in her attempts to set aside a previous suspension which had been ordered for "safety" precautions.

A thought for the day — German philosopher Wilhelm Hegel once said: "Life has a value only when it has something valuable as its object."

She Gives Tips How To Be Friend Indeed

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

"If there's anything I can do for you, be sure to let me know."

Most of us have rattled off that sentence many times. It's the conventional thing to say to a friend who has been bereaved, or has a serious illness in the family, or is in some other kind of trouble.

But it's usually an empty gesture. The offer sounds magnanimous, and it can be made with relative safety because few people are likely to take you up on it.

If you really want to help bear the burden of a friend in trouble, you won't stop with a vague offer to "do anything." You'll actually do something. What you do is less important than the fact you perform a concrete act of kindness.

This advice comes from an extraordinarily sensitive and thoughtful article published by Presbyterian Life magazine. The article is signed by "Joan Richards," which is the pseudonym of a great Christian woman who has suffered much in recent months because of the protracted illness of a loved one.

From her own experiences, "Joan Richards" has distilled several very practical, very specific suggestions on how to help a friend in trouble.

This is what she says:

1. "Go to see your friend, especially if, because of illness, he is cut off from the world. It is generally better to telephone before you go. Don't stay long. And don't feel that you have to take flowers, books or jellied soup to be welcome."

2. While you're there, look around and see what practical needs the family may have that you are in a position to meet. Usually "you can spot helpful things you can do — running errands, sitting with the patient, inviting the children to a meal." If you do, "make a specific offer to do them."

3. "If you can't go to call in person, check up on your friend by phone." And if even that is impractical for some reason, "the next best thing is a note or card."

4. Don't stop with one thoughtful act: "do it again." In the first few days after tragedy strikes a family, many friends and neighbors are solicitous. But as time passes, most people forget.

5. Talk to your friend about his trouble. "You may find it awkward, especially if your friend's grief is fresh, and you can see that you are shaking up his surface calm by mentioning it. But it is better for the calm to be shaken now and then."

6. Remember your friend in your prayers every day—and let him know that you do. "We have been much sustained over the months by people who simply call to tell us that they think of us and pray for us. Perhaps the prayers of our friends are sustaining us whether we know they are praying or not: theologians could probably elucidate this question. All I know is that the knowledge that a friend is keeping us in his prayers is very comforting."

7. If you find that you can't do anything for your friend, besides pray for him, don't fret about it. "Not everybody in the world can help everybody else. For most of us, opportunities to help far outrun our funds of energy and time. We are weighed down with a burden of things left undone. Each time we think of some friend in trouble whom we have neglected, our conscience aches." But your guilt feelings won't help your friend.

Hamilton Mission Programs March 8

JOINS STAFF — James R. Netherton has joined the staff of the First Southern Baptist Church of Novato as minister of music and youth. Netherton, a student at the Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary, Strawberry, is a graduate of the California Baptist College, Riverside, and the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Fort Worth, Tex.

Beginning next Sunday, two missions will be held concurrently at Hamilton Air Force Base.

The annual programs bring top religious speakers to the base chapels. The Protestant mission will be held in Chapel One at 7:30 p.m. from March 8 through March 11. The Catholic mission will be held in Chapel Two at 7:30 p.m. from March 8 through March 13.

Speaker for the Catholic mission will be Rev. Brendan Mitchell, head of the Third Order of Francisans in 11 Western states for 25 years. He founded the national magazine "Way," and has edited it ever since.

Speaker for the Protestant mission will be Dr. C. Douglas Hayward, minister of Trinity Methodist Church, Berkeley. He will also speak at the two morning services in Chapel One March 8.

Chaplain Earl D. Roderick, project chaplain for the mission schedule, predicts that the programs will be the most successful ever held at Hamilton.

Motorcycle Goes By; Woman Hurt

Mrs. Phyllis Ingham, 47, of 412 Redhill Avenue, San Anselmo, suffered a head cut when she was struck by a motorcycle or possibly the cyclist's body Thursday night.

Mrs. Ingham was walking across Greenfield Avenue, just west of Ancho Vista, at 7:05 p.m., accompanied by her husband, Richard, when she was struck.

Police Chief Raymond P. Buchignani said Mrs. Ingham was struck either by a motorcycle driven by John Joseph Winters, 201 Spring Grove Avenue, San Rafael, or by Winters himself as he rode the cycle.

Mrs. Ingham, who was knocked to the pavement, was treated at San Rafael General Hospital.

Lagunitas Sites To Be Sought

Members of the Site Selection Committee in Lagunitas School District agreed Thursday night to schedule a meeting with the district architect, Martin Rosse, to look at five possible sites for new schools.

The committee hopes to come up with one site in the Woodacre and one in the Lagunitas-Forest Knolls area to recommend to the school board for purchase. Committee Chairman Winifred Frederick of Lagunitas said her group wants the architect to look at three possible sites in the Woodacre area and two in the Lagunitas-Forest Knolls area.

Tour with the architect has been tentatively set March 7, Mrs. Frederick said.

Next meeting of the committee will be held at the school at 8 p.m., March 19.

Novato, San Rafael Tie For Marin Cage Title

Independent-Journal Sports

12 Saturday, Feb. 29, 1964

10th Straight Win For Novato Quint!

Novato High School's Hornet cage team won its 10th straight game last night and with the victory came co-championship honors in the Marin Athletic League. Victims of the Hornets were the Terra Linda Trojans who fell, 57-33.

While the Hornets were closing out the season in the Terra Linda gym, San Rafael was knocking off Drake, 64-48. That gave both San Rafael and Novato 10-2 records and MAL co-championship honors.

Terra Linda got off to a 6-0 lead before Novato found the scoring range last night. When the buzzer sounded for the end of the first half, Novato had a razor-thin lead of 20-19.

But then in the third quarter, lightning struck. Novato outscored the Trojans 21-3. Leading the way for the Hornets was Nick Willard with 8 points in that big third stanza. Novato, hitting 50 per cent from the floor in the second half, outscored the suddenly cold Trojans 37-14.

A crowd of perhaps 1,000 persons watched in amazement as the Hornets scored basket after basket in that third quarter. It spelled doom for Terra Linda which closed out its season in last place with a 1-11 record.

Novato was led in the scoring column by Barry Hachmyer who scored 18 points. Willard had 13 and Fred Arnold, Novato's 6-6 center, scored 12.

For Terra Linda, only four cagers made the scoring column. High was Bill Brody with 19 points, more than half the total of the entire team.

Willard, the Hornets' top scorer, ended the regular season with a total of an even 200 points and a 16.7 average, good for second place in MAL individual scoring. He fouled out of the game in the fourth quarter, stopping his chances of adding to that total.

Novato	14	6	21	16—57

Terra Linda scorers—Bill Brody, 9-1-19; Kraig Kilby, 2-0-4; Don Knotts, 3-0-6; Brian Perron, 1-2-4. Totals: 15-3—33.

ALONG MARIN'S SPORTS TRAIL

By JIM GILMARTIN

Novato Cagers Add A Cinderella Chapter To League Record Book

Win or lose next week's playoff game with the San Rafael Bulldogs, the Novato High School Hornets today have engraved their names in the Cinderella chapter of the Marin Athletic League record book.

By tying the favored Bulldogs for the MAL basketball championship, the Hornets have astounded local sports experts, including—and especially—the I-J staff, which tabbed them to finish no better than fifth in the seven-team league.

Back in January the experts looked good. Novato had lost its first two league games and on the season had only a 6-6 record. But then things began to happen and in the ensuing six weeks the Hornets knocked down 11 of 12 opponents, losing only by two points to a fine Napa team in a non-league fray. By winning 10 straight league games — including five by a total of only nine points —the Hornets finished with a 10-2 league record and the co-championship with San Rafael.

What turned the so-so Hornets of early-season into a sizzling championship team of today? "Well," explained Coach John Panagakis, "it came when we beat Marin Catholic for our first league win back in January. We'd lost badly to San Rafael and Tam, but after beating Marin Catholic the kids just seemed to jell. Not just two or three kids, but the whole squad.

"ANOTHER REASON," he continued, "was the coach decided to keep his mouth shut. I did quite a bit of hollering in the early season, but I decided to keep quiet and leave the games pretty much to the players. It seemed to help."

Panagakis is an excitable 27-year-old Greek who admits the control of emotions in the heat of battle is quite a task, like licking the cigarette habit. But he did it, with excellent results. Five of Novato's league wins were by two points or less. Oh, the tension!

PANAGAKIS IS a native of San Francisco, a grad of Washington High and Cal Poly at San Luis Obispo. Married and the father of four children, he came to Novato in 1961 from a brief teaching job in SLO.

Novato finished the regular season with a 17-7 record. Its 10 league victories this season were more than the school recorded in the last four years combined. A real Cinderella story.

PERSONALLY, we favor San Rafael over Novato next week in their playoff. The Bulldogs rank as the better all-around team and were badly hurt with the loss by injury of Rod Monti. If he had been healthy all season we feel the Bulldogs would have won the crown easily rather than sharing it, but that's sports.

Nevertheless, Novato and Coach Panagakis have done a great job and have created new enthusiasm in the sport up in North Marin. They've won a co-championship against the odds. Three cheers and a hip-hip hooray!

Mrs. Welch Is Trophy Winner

Mrs. John K. Welch shot a 98-36—62 to win the Sabella Trophy at the Mill Valley Women't Golf Club yesterday.

Winners were:

Class B—Mrs. John K. Welch, 98-36—62; Mrs. Hugh Richardson, 93-25—68; Mrs. Bruno Maraccini, 103-32—71.

PLAYOFF SET MONDAY OR TUESDAY AT DRAKE

Co-champions San Rafael and Novato high schools will meet in a playoff game either Monday or Tuesday, probably at Drake High School gym in San Anselmo, to determine the Marin Athletic League's representative at two post-season basketball tournaments.

The co-champs finished with 10-2 league records last night and the playoff is to see which team will play in the Camellia City tournament in Sacramento next Thursday, Friday and Saturday and the Tournament of Champions at Berkeley, March 12-13-14.

Principals Al Thomson of San Rafael and Robert Wisgerhof of Novato are negotiating today on the playoff date. The Independent-Journal learned it will be an evening game—7 or 7:30 o'clock—at neutral Drake High court.

An announcement will be made Monday.

Bulldogs Top Drake As McKinnon Stars

Center Sets Rebound Record In 64-48 Win

San Rafael High School's basketball team is co-champion of the Marin Athletic League after rolling to a 64-48 triumph over the Drake Pirates last night before about 800 fans in the Drake gym in San Anselmo.

The Bulldogs of San Rafael and Hornets of Novato closed out the season last night with identical 10-2 records, good for one-half shares of the league title. Novato downed Terra Linda last night 57-33.

The Drake quint fought desperately to upset the San Rafael championship plans in the first half, holding the Bulldogs to a slim one-point lead at the end of the half, 28-27.

The game started off slow with San Rafael outscoring the Pirates 12-6 in the first quarter. But then in the second quarter, Drake exploded for 21 points as the Pirates hit 78 per cent of their shots from the floor.

The second half was all San Rafael, however, the Bulldogs outscoring Drake 34-21.

Star of the game for the Bulldogs was center John McKinnon who set a school record in the rebounding department, plucking off 30 rebounds. In addition he scored 15 points

"He was a one man gang," said Drake coach Carl Brown about McKinnon. "He played a tremendous game."

High scorer for San Rafael was Wade Roberts with 16 points. Others in the double figures for S.R. were Mike Menne with 12, Steve Spurling with 10, and McKinnon.

Lorry Galassi of Drake, the league's top scorer, racked up 16 points to run his total to 220 points this year in league play, good for an 18.3 average.

San Rafael controlled the backboards, outrebounding the Pirates by a 62-25 count, McKinnon leading the way. The big San Rafael center scored 12 of his 15 points in the second half, bringing the Bulldogs out of the fire.

San Rafael's top scorer, Rod Monti, still nursing an injured ankle, was suited up but didn't play.

San Rafael	12	16	19	15—64
Drake	6	21	9	12—48

San Rafael scorers — Pat Haven, 0-1-1; Rich Ahern, 3-0-6; John McKinnon, 6-3-15; Wade Roberts, 6-4-16; Steve Spurling, 5-0-10; Mike Menne, 6-0-12; Jim Schmidt, 0-2-2; Clem Glynn, 1-0-2. Totals: 27-10—64.

Drake scorers—Bob Brackett, 7-0-14; Larry Stein, 5-2-12; Bob Tobin, 0-1-1; Rick Paulson, 0-2-2; Rod Keener, 0-1-1; Lorry Galassi, 6-4-16; Dennis Hannigan, 1-0-2. Totals: 19-10—48.

TARS WIN, PLAY AGAIN TONIGHT

It's one down and one to go for the College of Marin cage team as it gets set to take on Shasta College's basketballers tonight at 8 o'clock in the San Rafael High School gym.

The Tars started the weekend right last night with an 89-71 victory over College of the Siskiyous in the San Rafael gym, but they'll have to come back strong again tonight if they are to keep their chances alive in the Golden Valley Conference scramble.

If the Tars click tonight like they did last night, it should be a double win for the weekend.

Marin coach Cal Riemcke was very pleased with the fast break and ball control displayed by his cagers last night. The passing was sharp and the shooting was on target. They shot for 46 per cent from the floor to only 36 per cent for Siskiyous.

Ron O'Connell topped the scoring for the Mariners with a 22-point performance. He was followed by Jay Johnson with 17; Brad Busch with 15; Jim Wylie, 11; Bill Hodgson, 9; Pete Bardea, 5; Rich Abbot, 4; Steve Anderson, 4, and Paul Goeckel, 2.

7-3 RECORD

The victory gave the Tars a 7-3 mark in the Golden Valley Conference.

A very big factor in the game was that the Tars got a substantial lead and were able to give the starters a rest as all the reserves got in the game in the second half. The team will be that much stronger for tonight's action.

Marin jumped off to an early lead, but Siskiyous closed the gap to 18-14. By the end of the first half, however, the Tars had moved to a 41-24 lead that was never threatened.

In the free throw department, Marin made 7 out of 17 shots from the line and Siskiyous made 15 out of 29.

Redwood Clouts Tam To Get Third Place In Prep Race

Closing the Marin Athletic League season in big fashion, Redwood High School's basketballers drubbed Tamalpais High School's cagers 74-53 last night in the Redwood gym in Larkspur.

Last night, Redwood spurted out to a 19-15 lead in the first quarter and widened the margin to 39-30 at intermission. After three quarters, Redwood dominated the game with a 58-40 lead. Coach Dick Hart of Redwood then threw in the reserves for the fourth quarter when the game was all locked up.

Hart credited Hillard Witt and Tom Bly with good games because of their rebounding and scoring punch. Witt led the team in both rebounds (15) and points (15). Other Giants in double figures were Dave Auerbach with 13 and Bob Piro and Tom Bly each with 12.

GRAY HIGH

None of the Tam cagers hit in double figures, Larry Gray leading the Indians with 9 points.

Tam hit 15 out of 30 free throws and Redwood scored 10 out of 21.

The Giants had their best season ever, 17-8 overall, counting practice games. Their scoring average of 63 points per game in league contests is the highest offensive average in the league's history.

Tamalpais	15	15	10	13—53
Redwood	19	20	19	15—74

Tamalpais scorers — Ellis Williams, 3-1-7; Cedric Collett, 2-2-6; Chris Schuepbach, 3-0-6; Rich Olsen, 1-4-6; Robin Prosch, 4-0-8; Dan O'Brien, 2-4-8; Larry Gray, 4-1-9. Totals: 19-15—53.

Redwood scorers—Don Bly, 0-1-1; Larry Herst, 1-0-2; Bob Piro, 5-2-12; Dave Auerbach, 5-3-13; Hillard Witt, 6-3-15; Tom Bly, 6-0-12; Larry Wolfe 4-0-8; Jim Carroll, 2-0-4; Tom Strathairn, 1-0-2; Jim Halm, 2-1-5. Totals: 32-10—74.

Koufax Signs For 100 Pct. Hike

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sandy Koufax likes zeros on his paycheck as well as on the scoreboard.

The stylish left-hander shutout 11 opponents in 1963 and yesterday he climaxed prolonged negotiations with the Los Angeles Dodgers by signing a contract for a reported $70,000. The amount was twice his 1963 salary of $35,000.

Sandy's raise topped by $10,000 the increase awarded to right-handed pitcher Don Drysdale Thursday. Big Don signed for an estimated $70,000—a $25,000 boost over his 1963 salary of $45,000.

The southpaw strikeout king and General Manager E. J. Buzsy Bavasi came to terms yesterday after a three-hour conference.

Koufax had spoken of quitting baseball and accepting what was termed a lucrative career in another but unidentified field.

Sandy vigorously denied publicized reports that he had demanded $90,000. He refused to give any exact figures as did Bavasi.

"Sandy is a lot happier than I am," said Bavasi with a trace of a smile. "I am pleased to give him what he wanted but I'm not happy about it."

"I'm really happy," chirped Sandy, "but I was disturbed to read about that $90,000. That figure was never mentioned or discussed in our meetings."

Koufax came to the negotiations armed with impressive credentials. He led the majors in earned run average with 1.88, shutouts (11), strikeouts (306) and tied Juan Marichal for the lead in victories. Koufax posted a 25-5 record; Marichal had 25-8.

Koufax weighs 196 in spite of a full winter on the banquet circuit. He weighed 205 last season and hopes to reach 200 by the time the season opens.

Sandy said he hasn't thrown a ball since the World Series but feels in great shape. He said he hopes for another good year—if not a better one than 1963.

Koufax will be aboard the Dodger jet Saturday when it takes off for Vero Beach, Fla. "That's if I can get to the cleaners on time and get my clothes."

A's Boss Finally Signs K.C. Lease

KANSAS CITY — A jovial Charles O. Finley has signed a four-year stadium lease for his Athletics, ending his bitter dispute with the city which led him to the brink of expulsion from the American League.

Finley, Mayor Ilus Davis and other city officials appeared anixous to forget the extended controversy and concentrate on the baseball team.

The city sought and obtained a four-year pact with a clause terming it "firm, binding and non-cancellable." Mayor Davis said this meant the city could seek an injunction against Finley moving the club and sue for damages if he should.

The American League backed the city to the limit. Just a week ago, A.L. owners voted to authorize a meeting to consider an act on lifting Finley's franchise. He quickly told the city he would sign for four years.

GOLF LEADERS

NEW ORLEANS — Mason Rudolph and Lionel Hebert each carded a 68 yesterday to share the first round lead in the $50,000 Greater New Orleans Open golf tournament, two strokes ahead of third-place co-holders Jack Nicklaus and Dave Marr.

CARTER WINS

NEW YORK — Top middleweight contender Rubin "Hurricane" Carter began yelling again today for a shot at Joey Giardello's crown after a nationally-televised, unanimous decision over unranked James Ellis last night at Madison Square Garden. The officials scored it for Carter by cards of 7-2-1, 6-3-1 and 7-3. Carter decked the lanky Ellis once in the otherwise dull bout, witnessed by 3,800 fans.

BOWLING TOURNEY

OAKLAND — The Hawaii Stars of Honolulu, who came 2,000 miles to compete in their first American Bowling Congress tourney, took over the lead in the five-man regular team division last night by knocking over 2909 pins.

CLAY PRAISED

CAIRO—The Egyptian Boxing Commission sent a message to heavyweight champion Cassius Clay today, inviting him to visit the United Arab Republic and saying, "You proved that boxing depends on art, good manners and a strong will."

FORMER CHAMP GUS LESNEVICH DEAD AT 49

CLIFFSIDE PARK, N.J. (AP) — Gus Lesnevich, winner of the fastest knockout ever recorded in a light-heavyweight title bout and champion from 1941-48, collapsed and died of a heart attack in his doctor's office last night. He was 49 last Saturday.

Lesnevich had complained of chest and stomach pains and was driven to the office of Dr. John Williams. He died shortly after arriving there.

"I didn't even get a chance to examine him," Dr. Williams said.

During his 15-year ring career, Lesnevich compiled a record of 57-14-5. He knocked out 21 opponents and was stopped five times, all on cuts. A brawny fighter, he was known for his all-out efforts and strong finishes.

USF Dons Clinch Coast Cage Title

University of San Francisco moves home tonight for the first of four tune-up games before the Dons enter the National Collegiate Athletic Assn. Western regional championships.

USF sewed up the West Coast Athletic Conference title last night thanks to a pair of narrow victories—its own over San Jose State 48-46, and Loyola's 43-42 upset of Pacific.

The Dons' victory was their 14th straight and ninth without a setback in league play. Second-placers San Jose and Pacific each dropped to 5-4, mathematically out of contention with only three games to play.

Elsewhere, St. Mary's beat Pepperdine 75-67 and University of California at Santa Barbara thumped Santa Clara 70-59.

USF meets Santa Barbara tonight in a game that won't count in conference standings. Pacific is at Pepperdine, St. Mary's at Loyola and San Jose at Santa Clara.

Free throws and Ollie Johnson brought USF victory Friday. The Dons had only 16 field goals against the nation's third-leading defense but prevailed 16-6 at the foul line.

Johnson scored 25 points, including 16 of USF's 27 in the first half, and he grabbed 15 rebounds.

The Dons pulled ahead to stay early in the second half, stretched the lead to 48-42 and then held on as San Jose's final desperation shot for a tie fell short.

OVERTIME THRILLER

Most Dramatic Win Of Year For Seals

The San Francisco Seals are within two points of second place in the Western Hockey League after their most dramatic victory of the season before 6,428 fans at the Cow Palace.

The Seattle Totems led the Seals 3-2 right up to the last three seconds of the third period last night before Charlie Burns scored the goal that sent the game into overtime.

Len Haley scored at 6:33 in the overtime, slapping in the puck after a goal-mouth scramble that gave the Seals a 4-3 win.

The Seals set up the last ditch score in the third period by pulling goalie Bob Perreault and sending six men on the attack.

The loss moved Seattle into a second-place tie with Portland Buckaroos, who play the Seals at the Cow Palace Tuesday.

Crippled S.F. Warriors Beaten By The Celtics

NEW YORK (AP) — The crippled San Francisco Warriors hit the midway point of a five-games-in-five-nights marathon tonight when they meet the New York Knicks.

Only eight Warriors will suit up as Gary Phillips sits in San Francisco with a hairline fracture of his left angle and Nate Thurmond recovers from a groin injury in a hospital.

Both were missed last night as the Boston Celtics trimmed the Warriors 107-92 and won their regular season series from the San Franciscans, 5-3.

The defeat dropped the Warriors' lead over second-place St. Louis in the National Basketball Assn's. Western Division to 2½ games.

Seven Celtics scored in double figures while San Francisco's attack centered around Wilt Chamberlain's 30 points and Wayne Hightower's 21.

It's A Sweep For Novato; Class B Team Is Champion

Novato High School's Class B basketball team would not be outdone by the Novato varsity last night and won the championship of the Marin Athletic League Class B division.

The Hornets downed Terra Linda's Class B cagers 50-47 in a come-from-behind effort to wind up the league in first place with a 11-1 record.

In other final game action in the junior circuit, San Rafael wound up in second place with a 10-2 record when it nipped Drake 47-45, and Redwood handed Tamalpais its 12th straight loss, 45-40.

Going into the last quarter of the Novato-Terra Linda game, the Trojans were leading 39-36, but a Novato rally saved the day and championship. High scorers for Novato were Don Phillips with 13 points and Dennis Major and Jeff Tuel, each with 11. Rick Edwards was high for Terra Linda with 11 points.

In the tight San Rafael victory, Bill Pandiani topped the Bullpups' scoring with 16 points. Duke Iverson, also with 16 points headed the Drake scoring.

Redwood was led by Ken Tucker with 14 points and Russell Smith with 10 in its victory. Greg Tellis of Tam scored more than half his team's points, 21. The junior Indians went through the MAL with out a victory.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Small Epidemics Of Diphtheria Possible When Barriers Down

VAN DELLEN

Last year there were 294 cases of diphtheria, compared with 463 in 1962. Small outbreaks occurred in several parts of the country, which were brought under control via immunization.

In one of these areas, 90 per cent of the pupils at a certain school had received, in the fall of the year, protective shots against diphtheria, tetanus, and polio. Six of the children who developed diptheria attended this school and were among the 10 per cent not receiving this vaccine. Two of these victims were young girls and both died.

EPIDEMICS could happen anywhere because it is natural to let down the bars when everything is going along smoothly. Years of vigilance on the part of our health departments have gone into protecting us from many infectious diseases. But most vaccines do not offer life-time immunity and booster doses are needed from time to time.

Diptheria is highly contagious; it is transmitted through contact with an infected person or a carrier. Old-timers had to be careful of the milk, drinking water, and any objects that might have been handled by a victim of the disease, because virulent organisms live outside the body temporarily. This is why the room in which the sick parson is quarantined is cleansed so thoroughly before being used again.

THE DISEASE causes a super sore throat with headache, fatigue, and fever ranging from 101 to 103 degrees F. The throat and tonsils are swollen and congested. Twenty-four hours later, a group of small yellowish-white dots arise over the inflamed area. These spots coalesce into the telltale membrane so typical of diptheria. A swab taken from the throat and cultured will reveal the causative bacilli.

But inflammation is only part of the disturbance. The bacteria give off a powerful toxin that is responsible for the toxemia and marked prostration. This is the rationale behind the use of anti-toxin in treatment. Penicillin is of value in eliminating secondary bacteria that deter recovery and encourage complications.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.)

HIVES FROM EXCITEMENT

A. K. writes: Whenever my 7-year-old grandson gets nervout or excited, he breaks out in hives. Can anything be done to stop this?

REPLY

It is difficult to avoid stress and all forms of excitement. But the parents can assist by maintaining a quiet and calm household. A sedative may help if hives becomes a problem; otherwise it is better to disregard these bumps.

PILLS FOR PROSTATE

C. F. writes: Is it true that enlarged prostate can be cured with pills?

REPLY

An antibiotic or a sulfonamide is helpful when infection is responsible for swelling. But pills are of no value in in the enlargement associated with the passing years. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on prostate disease.

Traffic Poles On Gate Span Held Hazards

Golden Gate Bridge District directors yesterday instructed the district's operating committee to seek a better method for traffic control than the hard rubber poles now being used.

The removable poles, used to mark lanes when traffic direction is changed to provide extra lanes in the direction of the commute rush, are a traffic hazard, the board agreed.

Manager James Adam conceded the poles are particularly bad in hours of darkness when it's dangerous for a highway patrolman or a member of the bridge's patrol crews to stop and pick up any pole which has been knocked into a traffic lane by an erring driver.

Adam noted that shortly after the poles were put in use in October, 1962, there was a fatal head-on crash in which the poles were a contributing factor.

Adam has recommended overhead arches with traffic control lights as a solution to the problem.

The board also voted to determine what it would cost to have an architect draw plans for a proposed expansion of the bridge plaza and administration building.

2 Birthdays; Hall To Give One; No Price

Public relations man Price Hall, laden with two birthdays, has offered to give one away to anyone celebrating his birthday today.

Leap Year Day babies suffer from a perennial shortage of birthdays, one every four years, and Hall figured he didn't really need both of his birthdays.

He said he would give his March 5, 1913, birthday for use "during the off-years," thereby giving the recipient a birthday every year.

Hall said he was born April 4, 1913, in Lincoln, Placer County, but through an error his birth certificate carries the date March 5.

"I celebrate April 4, but I accept presents on both days," he said.

Bagley Supports Gov. Rockefeller

William T. Bagley (R-San Rafael) is one of six California Republican assemblymen who came out today in support of Nelson A. Rockefeller for Presidential nominee.

"Governor Rockefeller typifies the sensible middle way that always has been the touchstone for Republican success," commented Bagley. "We cannot permit the same center to be besieged, bedevilled and beset by anti-Republican elements. Senator Goldwater is a fine man. Some of friends aren't."

The five other California Republican assemblymen who are supporting Rockefeller are Carl A. Britschgi of Redwood City, Houston I. Flournoy of Claremont, Milton Marks of San Francisco, George W. Milias of Gilroy, and John G. Veneman of Modesto.

A former Kentfield real estate man, charged with perjury in filing for veteran's tax exemption last year, won a week's continuance yesterday in Marin Municipal Court.

Edward D. Lederman, 58, appeared before Judge Leonard A. Thomas yesterday afternoon and asked for time to get an attorney to defend him. The judge set 1:30 p.m. next Friday as the time for Lederman to enter his plea.

Lederman's home was at 16 Treetop Lane in Kentfield until last June, when his wife won an interlocutory decree of divorce.

Dist. Atty. Roger P. Garety charged that Lederman failed to report stocks, bank accounts and insurance policies when he filed for veteran's tax exemption at the county assessor's office.

Bonnie McKillop, 17, of Sacramento, who began riding horseback when she was 9, has been named queen of the 1964 Junior Grand National Livestock Exposition at the San Francisco Cow Palace from March 21 to 26.

Market Chain, CORE Reach An Agreement

The Lucky supermarket chain has settled a dispute with the Congress of Racial Equality that brought picketing, boycotts and the newest civil rights weapon—the shop-in.

CORE initiated the demonstration, contending Lucky Stores, Inc. had reneged on agreements to hire more Negroes in addition to those already working. Lucky denied discrimination and charged CORE with wanting "reverse discrimination."

San Francisco Mayor John F. Shelley hailed the agreement, reached Friday after the latest of a series of meetings in his office, as "a milestone for the future here and throughout the country."

Details of the agreement reached yesterday were not announced.

Marin CORE called off its picketing of the Lucky market in Fairfax today. Several CORE members picketed the store last evening. Chairman Douglas Quiett said no demonstrations would be planned pending ratification of the Lucky agreement by Bay Area CORE chapters.

Judge Considers Dismiss Petition

A Butte County judge yesterday took under submission a petition to dismiss charges of falsification of corporate records and conspiracy to commit grand theft against a San Rafael man.

Kenneth Robert Barrick of 36 Knight Drive in Glenwood was arrested Nov 7 after the Butte County Grand jury filed the charges against him and others in the Lon-Dell Construction Co. Barrick headed the firm.

The alleged offenses relate to financing of homes and duplexes built in Butte County.

Superior Court Judge William M. Savage said he would rule on the petition for dismissal Friday. Attorneys for the defendants argued for dismissal, claiming insufficient evidence.

Bolinas Board Delays Action On Boat Ramp

Bolinas Harbor District commissioners Thursday night continued discussion of acquisition of property on the Stinson Beach shore for a boat launching ramp, but took no action. Gene W. Mc Daniel president, said today.

A meeting is to be set "shortly," he added, with the Army Corps of Engineers to discuss reports submitted to the corps regarding feasibility of navigational improvements for Bolinas channel and lagoon.

Good Living Near San Pedro Point

This aerial view was shot low enough to show plenty of detail in the Peacock Gap area near San Pedro Point.

First Aid And Comfort In The Schools

See Page M-8

MECHANICS PROVIDE 17-year-old Kent Weaver with many enjoyable hours as he tinkers with his 1953 Oldsmobile engine in the garage of the Weaver home at Lagunitas. Being blind, he finds, is no handicap in this kind of work "because some of it is so intricate that sight is useless anyway." His description of the engine's present status: "Full house, bored and stroked, with a full race Isky camshaft." But there are other refinements which are Kent's own "trade secrets." Kent Weaver Has A Built-In Sonar

Blind Youth Leads Normal Life Without Aid Of Cane Or Dog

By TINA PRESS

"Certainly I go to the movies," says Kent Weaver, "I learn a lot from them."

Kent Weaver, 17-year-old junior at Sir Francis Drake High School in San Anselmo, is totally blind. But he needs no aid as he follows a regular school day, with the same classes and homework as any Drake student. He uses neither cane nor guide dog.

KENT TAKES notes in class with a slate and stylus or a minature braille typewriter. Most of his reading assignments are available on records or tapes.

"The only problem" he says," is getting a point emphasized or repeated for clarification. My mother will usually read to me, though, when I need help."

Kent did not lose his sight completely until the end of his freshman year at Drake. He knows his way around the corridors well and walks with assurance.

Occasionaly Kent has to count his steps, but for the most part he needs no such "crutch."

"Once I day-dreamed when I was walking and crashed into a cement wall," he laughs Kent. "It's difficult to concentrate only on walking.

Kent has developed what he calls " a type of sonar." This often causes him to sense an object in his path and stop short. To a bystander this habit can be surprising, because every action is completely natural.

MUSIC AND mechanics dominate Kent's spare time. He plays the piano by ear and has picked up techniques from Ralph Sutton, famed jazz pianist. Kent also plays first trombone in Drake's Pep Band and the advanced band class.

"Mr. Smith (Perry Smith, Drake music teacher) has really encouraged me," says Kent. "I'd get so mad when I couldn't quite remember the notes of a piece that I'd practice for hours."

Kent, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walt Weaver, Lagunitas, is planning to take the five-year music course offered at San Francisco State and possibly become a teacher at the California State School for the Blind. He feels that a music program is needed as part of the blind students' curriculum to provide outside activities.

AN INFECTION from an injury when Kent was 3 settled in his eyes. His sight became progressively worse after the fifth grade.

"Like any typical teenager," he says, "I put things off, so it took me two semesters to learn. I didn't think there was any hurry."

He owns two typewriters—a braille and a standard. He uses the braille typewriter for rough drafts, then rewrites the final copy on his regular typewriter.

"It's much easier to erase braille," he says. "All you have to do is squash it."

IN ADDITION to his music, Kent tinkers with engines. "This kind of manual work is suited for the blind," he explains, "because some of it is so intricate that sight is useless anyway."

Academically K e n t describes himself as fulfilling only "about one-third of my potential."

But, he adds, "I get no sympathy from teachers regarding late assignments. After all, why should I?"

INTENT UPON A classroom lecture, Kent Weaver takes notes in braille as he listens to his Sir Francis Drake High School teacher. Young Weaver follows a regular school day schedule. A number of special tools help him to overcome the handicap of being sightless. Included are recordings, tapes and record-player which substitute for most of his reading assignments, and the stylus and slate which, along with a miniature braille typewriter, enable him to take notes.

THE PIANO AND THE TROMBONE share the musical interests of Kent Weaver. At the keyboard he is a follower of jazz artist Ralph Sutton. He plays trombone in the Drake High School Pep Band and advanced band class, and his ambition is to become a teacher of music at the California State School for the Blind.

AT THE MARIN COUNTY LIBRARY in the Marin Civic Center, Assistant Librarian Olanne Palen selects books from the shelves that have been requested by letter by a shut-in. The books will then be mailed to the reader as part of a program that makes the library's reading resources available to those unable to leave their homes, or those living too far off the beaten tracks for even the book-mobiles. (Independent-Journal photos)

Their Mailman Is Also The Librarian

The Shut-Ins And The Secluded Still Get Their Books And Reference Materials

By ROBERT COPPOCK

The Marin County Library, with its branches and book-mobiles, attempts to reach into all parts of Marin County, to make books available to all. But there are some that cannot be reached.

Some persons live in areas too sparsely populated to make even a stop by a book-mobile once a week worthwhile. Also, ill and aged persons, and persons without a car, many times find themselves isolated, even if they do not live off the beaten track.

THE LIBRARY, with some help from the federal government, is making an effort to serve even these people. The mailman is their librarian.

Persons living far from town have, in the past, many times used the mails to provide basic needs. Large firms have been created through the mail order business.

County Librarian Virginia Keating has started a program to tap this resource. Uncle Sam gives her a lift by allowing libraries preferred rates for the sending of books. The rates, by the way, also apply to the library subscriber when he sends the books back.

THESE PERSONS cannot come to the library to use the card catalogs, but the librarians have been going out of their way to be helpful. A letter or phone call often establishes enough rapport to let the librarian learn the tastes of the subscriber.

Sometimes the librarian picks the books. For instance, one person who loves mystery novels has books picked out and sent regularly.

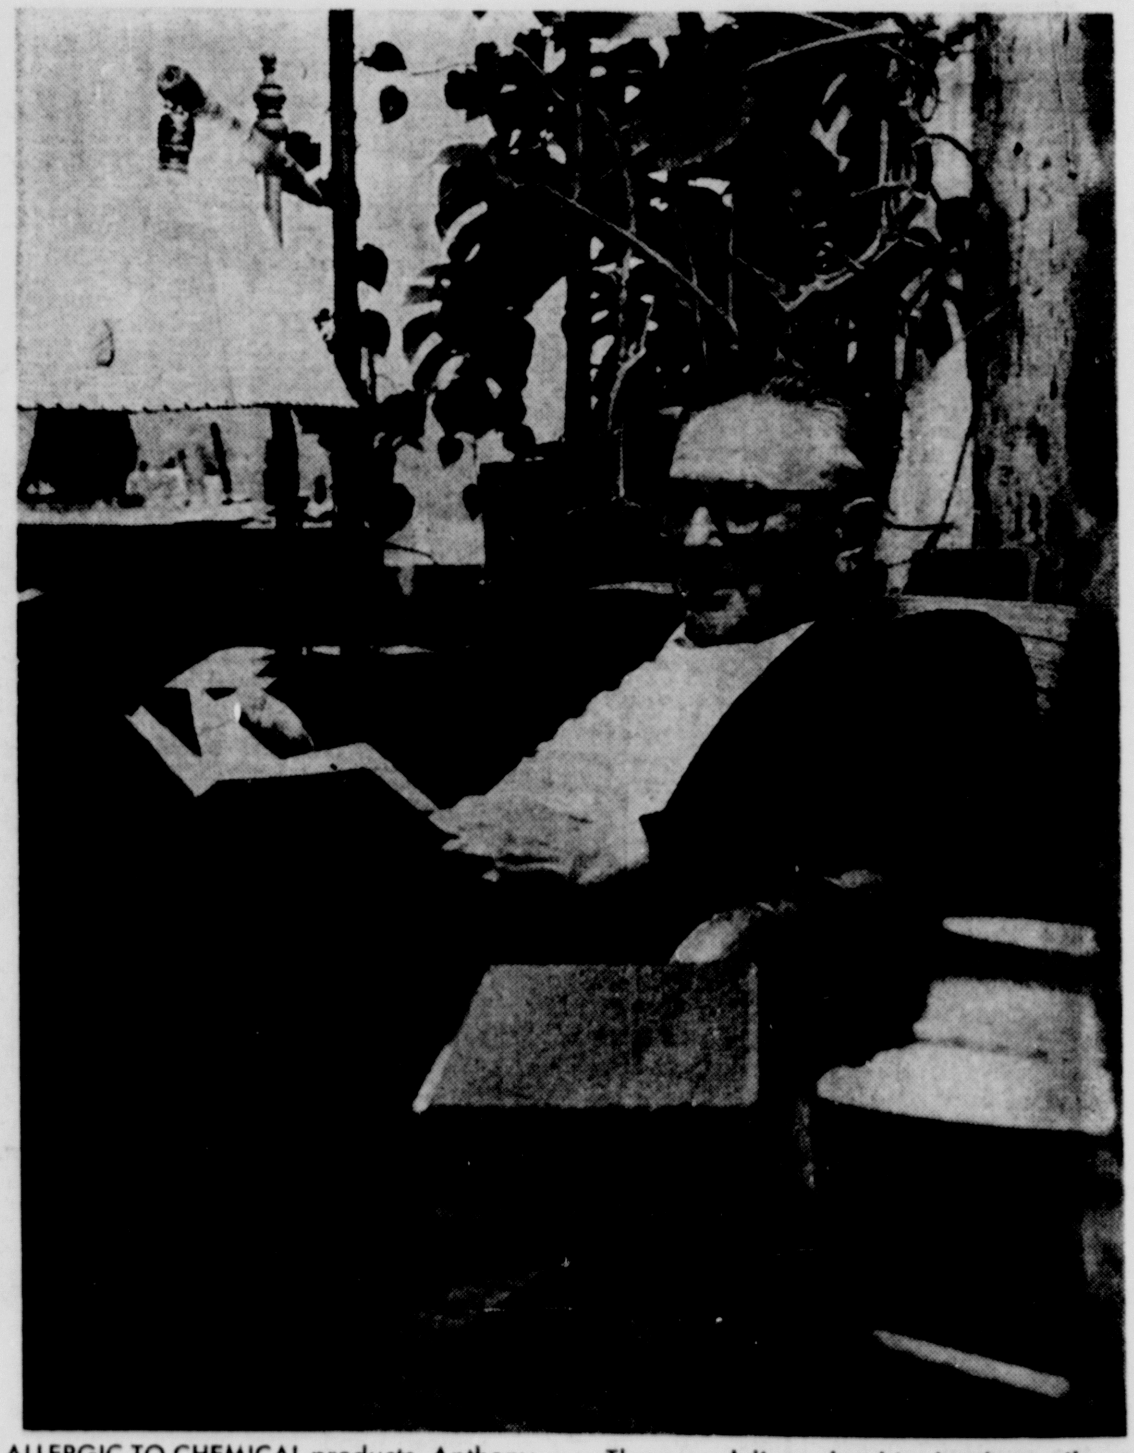

Other persons, including one retired librarian in a rest home, periodically send in specific requests for books. These requests are promptly filled, even if the book must be found outside the library in such places as the state library in Sacramento.

Still others just want specific information, and the librarians help with the research.

ONE PERSON, Mrs. Keating reported, wanted to raise mealworms for fun and profit at her Tamalpais Valley home. The library could find little on its shelves on the subject, but did find an article in a large bound volume of a scientific journal at the University of California.

Rather than pay mailing costs for the heavy book in this case, the few pertinent pages were photostated and sent to the woman, who was allowed to keep them.

The library can also send out regular samplers, collections of various types of books of interest to different members of the family.

The Dipsea Trail Is For Painting

Ted Christensen Is Neither A Hiker Nor A Runner; He's A Landscape Artist

By ELIZABETH LEWIS

To most people, the Dipsea Trail is for hiking—or avoiding.

To the more athletic, one day a year, in August, the date of the famed and fatiguing Dipsea Race, it becomes a route for running—and collapsing.

CHRISTENSEN'S studio—"Fog Farm," he calls it—overlooks the runners' nightmare at a point where the trail climbs the shoulder of Mt. Tamalpais.

But frequently Christensen is out of the studio and onto the trail itself, looking for an advantageous spot from which to begin still another canvas in his series of landscapes of scenes along and on the Dipsea Trail.

The series now totals numerous paintings, and from that output he has selected 30 oils for a current showing of his work at the Sand Dollar Gallery on Stinson's Beach's Main Street.

The show, which continues through March 29 and is open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. except Mondays, overflows into the new Farralon East Restaurant across the street.

The work on display goes back over a decade when Christensen first was struck by the logic of the Dipsea Trail as a subject for his paints and brushes.

THE TRAIL had its origin in the 1800s as a hikers' pathway and came by its name because, at the turn of the century, members of the Olympic Club would hike over it, beginning at Mill Valley, to Stinson Beach, then called Willow Camp, and take a dip in the sea water at the trail's end.

In 1904 two of the Olympic Club hikers stepped up the pace and raced each other "for the fun of it" over the rugged course.

THAT NEXT weekend, around a roaring fireplace in Coney's cabin on Mt. Tam, the Dipsea Indians were formed with the objective of conducting races every August over the trail.

The race was run annually for 27 years, then died of apathy in 1932 and 1933, to be revived in 1934 under new sponsorship. Again during World War II the event was abandoned temporarily but the races were resumed in 1946.

WHAT HE is interested in is its geography.

Runners have described it as "seven miles of imaginative hell." But the very terrain that makes it such a grueling test for the athletes also makes it ideal subject matter for the landscape artist.

The trail begins with a short jog from Lytton Square in the center of Mill Valley to and up the 433 steps that climb from the valley floor. Following the Dipsea signs, the trail rises steeply to the top of a ridge overlooking the Mill Valley-Muir Woods Road, runs along the road and then down to the quiet woods. Out of Muir Woods, it climbs again over a leaf-strewn and slippery trail and then up a long "hog's back." At Lone Tree, it dives down through fences and farms to Stinson Beach and the finish line.

LAST AUGUST, for the 53rd annual running of the race, 120 hopefuls started out and about half that number eventually crossed the finish line.

Hikers, the year-around, tackle it piecemeal or at a less taxing pace, and fare much better.

Christensen says he has been over most of the trail.

"But I've done it a little at a time and over a number of years."

He's satisfied to take his time, find the spot he wants, park his painting paraphernalia and, from there, capture the view on canvas. Or if he feels especially reluctant to exert himself, he can even paint the trail itself—from the comforts of his studio.

The Christensen exhibit is a forerunner of the first Stinson Beach Summer Festival of the Arts, a community project to be launched this year, according to Lyle Leverich, co-owner with Richard Stanley of the Sand Dollar and festival committee member.

Artist Christensen is a member of the Marin Society of Artists. Most of his paintings now being shown in Stinson Beach have not previously been exhibited.

ARTIST Ted Christensen of Mill Valley, painting paraphernalia in hand, trudges along the Dipsea Trail searching for an advantageous point from which he can do one of his landscapes. To Christensen, the trail is not a route for hiking or running. It is a treasure trove of scenic settings irresistible to the artist.

WITH HIS EASEL set up along the Dipsea Trail and intent upon a landscape taking shape on his canvas, Ted Christensen is a familiar sight to hikers along the Dipsea Trail. The approximately seven-miles-long-trail has provided Christensen with subject matter for many paintings, 30 of which are currently on exhibit at the Sand Dollar Gallery in Stinson Beach. FIRST GRADER Kimberly Souza of the Reed District's Bel Aire School is a happy little girl as she learns from Red Cross Gray Lady Mrs. Joseph Ferguson that she has passed her dental test with flying colors. The Gray Ladies working with the Reed District school nurse assist in conducting dental, vision and hearing tests along with performing other duties which otherwise might fall upon the shoulders of the busy classroom teachers. The Reed District was the second school district in the entire country to initiate such a Gray Lady program in cooperation with the American Red Cross.

Gray Ladies In The Schools

Red Cross Helping Hand Reaches Into New Area

By AUDREY PUMPHREY

Marinites are accustomed to the sight of American Red Cross Gray Ladies performing their errands of mercy and comfort in our hospitals.

Public schools, however, are a less familiar setting for these women who serve so unselfishly.

But there they are—in at least one Marin school district.

The attractive housewife who assists the school nurse as she conducts vision tests for pupils of Bel Aire School belongs to the same great humanitarian army as the neatly-uniformed women and girls you have seen in hospital wards aiding nurses as they tend for the sick or writing letters for ailing veterans.

THEY ARE part of a pilot program launched in 1962 as the result of an agreement between the Red Cross and the Reed Union School District. It represents, according to Mrs. Maggie Anderson, executive director of Marin County's American Red Cross chapter, "a new and highly important role for our women."

In the Reed District schools, the Gray Ladies assist school nurse Mrs. Kay DeBrecht with the keeping of records, the rendering of first aid and the conducting of hearing, visual and other tests. Those duties and the limitations of the program are pinpointed by the terms of the agreement between the Red Cross and the school district, and it is emphasized that responsibility for the students remains with the principals and the school nurse.

BUT EDWARD Pino, the Reed District superintendent, and John Fitch, Jack Usilton and Robert Gaw, principals of the three Reed schools involved, agree that the women have been most helpful and that the pioneer program has been, beyond question, a success.

Mrs. DeBrecht agrees, saying the Gray Ladies have been "invaluable" to her and the school staffs.

The Reed School District is only the second district in the entire country to use this Red Cross Gray Lady program. First to pioneer it was Manatee County at Brandenton, Fla.

MRS. DeBRECHT heard about that experiment while attending a nurses' convention and brought the idea back home to the Marin chapter of the Red Cross.

Mrs. George Goddard of Belvedere was the chairman of the initial program at Reed in 1962. "She did a terrific job," says vivacious, brown-eyed Mrs. Jean Ehrenberg of Belvedere, the present chairman.

A rigid training program of 17 hours was required of all Red Cross Gray Ladies taking part in the program in the Reed schools.

General Red Cross Gray Lady training was under the supervision of Mrs. Laela Jerman of Hamilton Air Force Base. Bill Qvistgaard of Mill Valley and Don Marriott of Kentfield taught first aid. Mrs. Faith Mareck of Novato was in charge of home nursing. Mrs. DeBrecht headed "orientation in the schools" and Mrs. Sally Colmery of Belvedere the Red Cross orientation.

AT THE Red Cross Gray Lady capping ceremony held at Bel Aire School last Oct. 30, Reed Supt. Pino gave his approval of the pilot program:

"It leaves the teachers free to do the tasks they are qualified to do. It delegates to parents certain responsibilities that they have been trained to perform through the Red Cross Gray Lady program. If it were not for them, these tasks would fall on the shoulders of our teachers."

He praised the Gray Ladies as "hard-working, dedicated and loyal."

MRS. EHRENBERG devotes many hours to her work as program chairman and as a

Gray Ladies Now At Work Helping The School Nurse

Gray Lady in the Reed schools. She says she first became interested in the program when her daughter, Eve, last year brought home from school some literature on the subject. She had previously read about it in the newspapers.

She recalls with a smile her husband's words when she finally completed her intensive training program. "Welcome back," he told her.

But he is in full agreement with his wife that the Gray Lady program in the Reed Schools is "a wonderful thing."

Alan Ehrenberg is a salesman with International Business Machine. The Ehrenbergs with their two children, Eve, 6, and Douglas, 5, live on the Belvedere Lagoon. Both are from Washington state, but they met in Paris, France, while Jean was working for United States Army Headquarters in Europe.

AFTER THEIR marriage back in the States, Alan was, for a time, assigned to the IBM branch in Switzerland, and the young couple lived there for a year.

The Ehrenbergs ski, swim and ride bicycles for recreation. Jean sews, oil paints and works with mosaics — when she isn't performing her Gray Lady duties at the schools.

Mrs. DeBrecht says the work performed by Mrs. Ehrenberg and her colleagues of the Gray Ladies vary slightly from school to school, to fit the individual needs of the various Reed schools.

For instance, at the Del Mar School, the Red Cross Gray Ladies have the added task of checking on absences in the seventh and eighth grade classes by telephoning parents to learn the cause.

OTHER SCHOOLS, too, have found, through experience, specific means by which the Gray Ladies services can be especially helpful.

Like other Red Cross workers throughout Marin and throughout the country, the Gray Ladies in the Reed schools and in the hospitals, working with the elderly, the ailing and the young in many institutions and places and in many different ways, will be observing American Red Cross Month during March.

And no one lives up to that motto better than the loyal women who serve faithfully and tirelessly in the Reed Schools as they extend into still one more area the ever-reaching helping hand of the American Red Cross.

"Can Dresses With Metallic Yarns Be Drycleaned?"

More and more silver and gold yarns are being used to decorate dresses and suits these days. You are right in being concerned about its drycleanability. Metalic yarns usually have a copper core coated with gold, silver, nickle, tin or chromium. Often a lacquer coating is used to protect the metal from perspiration and atmosphere. If, in wearing, the lacquer coating is removed, the copper core may cause a discoloration. Gases in the air, too, may discolor the garment while it simply hangs in a closet.

Garments with metalic yarns may be drycleaned, of course, and in most cases without discoloration. However, much depends upon the quality and quantity of the coating on the yarns. Do not expect too much of it because wear and cleaning may, eventually, lessen the protection it gives and discoloration may result.

A PORTION OF the famed Javrotsky collection of Chinese art and artifacts will be on display at the Frances Young Gallery in the Marin Art and Garden Center, Ross, beginning next Friday and continuing through March 29. The Marin Society of Artists is sponsoring the show, which will open Friday at 8 p.m. with a talk by Gustave Guichard, curator of the collection, on "Aspects of Chinese Art." The late John I. Javrotsky, sinologist, philosopher, and linguist, spent 44 years in China, collecting extensively and researching in such fields as medicine, astronomy, mathematics and archaeology. While much of his collection could not be brought out of China, the pieces to be displayed in Marin demonstrate well the broad scope of his interests. In addition to the pieces pictured above—a 15-inch statuette Kwan Yin, Goddess of Mercy, late Ming (1368-1644) or early Ch'ing dynasty, of white China with an extremely refined ceramic technique, and the temple Dog of Fo, Ch'ing dynasty (1644-1912), of variegated glaze reminiscent of the classic Tang dynasty style —, the collection includes Chinese scrolls, bronze ceremonial vessels, bronze mirrors, porcelains, jade, antique jewelry, etc. The Young Gallery is open seven days a week from 2 to 4 p.m. and on Thursdays from 7 to 9 p.m.

THINGS TO COME. A British firm recently announced a budget-priced videotape recorder. The firm demonstrated their new unit to a group of stockholders in New York. They claim that their videotape recorder will sell for less than $200.

A videotape recorder will allow a user to connect the recorder to his TV set and record the picture as well as the sound on a tape. Then by rewinding and playing the tape back through his TV set, he can watch the program again or store it away for future viewing.

The present videotape recorders used in network TV studios cost approximately $20,000 each. Other units recently placed on the market for semi-professional use by schools, institutions and industry, sell for about $11,500. It has been rumored that a number of manufacturers—Ampex, Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co., RCA, Sony, and others are working to produce a videotape recorder for home use for under $500.

The British model demonstrated used ¼" tape, as is used in standard tape recorders, and the unit will accept reels up to 11½" in diameter. By using triple play Mylar tape on the 11½" reels, the recording time will be 22 minutes in each direction.

A reel of tape may cost from $15 to $36 depending on the quality of the tape. The tape speed on the British unit was 120 i.p.s. (inches per second) as compared to 7½ i.p.s. on standard tape recorders made for sound. The picture quality of the British videotape may be satisfactory to some, but certainly will not satisfy the discriminating person. It is believed that the picture quality of the units produced in the $500 bracket will be much clearer than the British unit.

To record a 1½ to 2 hour TV movie may require about 3 reels of tape at about $25 each or a cost of $75 per movie.

History: Greek & Old West

By DON KEOWN

A WEALTH of illustrations of some of the great archaeological finds in Greece and on Crete have been included in Joseph Alsop's "From the Silent Earth." Included are "The Priest King" from Knossos, at left, and the gold funeral "Mask of Agamemnon" above. The book is an amateur archaeologist's look at science's efforts to unravel the mysteries that still shroud Greece's Bronze Age. The author is one of the country's foremost political columnists, and brings his understanding of government and social structure to bear in his analysis of ancient Greece. (Photos by Alison Frantz)

It takes considerable audacity to set one self up as a political pundit. But columnist Joseph Alsop demonstrates an extra measure of that trait in his new book, "From the Silent Earth."

He not only invades the realms of the archaeologist and the historian in his work subtitled "A Report on the Greek Bronze Age," but dares to take issue with and expose the foibles of the professionals.

The result is a book which throws considerable light upon one of history's most shadowy eras and which should stimulate lay interest in a subject which in the past has been confined largely to musty, scholarly tomes with little general appeal.

Alsop, long an enthusiastic amateur student of archaeology and ancient history, is concerned in "From the Silent Earth" with Greek history of about 3000 B.C. to about 1000 B.C. His already keen interest in the period reached fever proportions after a visit with Prof. Carl F. Blegen to the excavations at Pylos which so disrupted and disputed many previous archaeological holdings. The book was largely an outgrowth of that trip, followed as it was by intense research on the subject.

Alsop chronicles the contributions of all the major archaeologists, philologists and other scientists who have probed into the mysteries of the Greek Bronze Age, pointing out also the contradictions and the inconsistencies of so many of their interpretations of their findings and their theories. He provides fascinating descriptions of these men and of their work. He tells what is known and what is suspected of the history of life of the times. And in those still dark areas where little knowledge has penetrated or in which there is widespread disagreement, he dares to offer some theories or speculations of his own.

Such questions as the reliability of Homer as a historian arise. The development of the complex Greek bureaucracy naturally intrigues political student Alsop mightily. But the major question with which he wrestles is the one which has so long eluded the scholars—the exact relationship between the mainland Greeks and the Minoan civilization of Crete. Here Alsop has ideas certain to trigger heated argument among the experts.

Whatever the effect of the book on professionals, it is certain to have an advantageous one upon the general reading public by focusing interest on a neglected but vital and colorful rung in western mankind's struggle up the ladder of progress.

HARRY SINCLAIR Drago's "Outlaws on Horseback" rivals, but does not displace, Paul Wellman's fine "A Dynasty of Western Outlaws" as the foremost history of the prairie desperadoes.

Drago is the better historian, Wellman the superior writer. It is not that Drago writes poorly. He writes well. But Wellman writes brilliantly. And he is by far the better organizer of his material.

But Drago, along with his old friend Homer Croy, to whom "Outlaws on Horseback" is dedicated, must be acknowledged as the foremost authority on western violence. He delights in riddling the many myths which have grown up around the more infamous badmen and their lawman adversaries. And while he professes admiration for Wellman's book, he does not spare him criticism. In such conflicts on facts, Drago seems the one on solid ground although, in all fairness, Wellman has not yet had his opportunity for rebuttal.

"Outlaws on Horseback" is a well documented and lively account of the terror spread by the Jameses, the Youngers, the Daltons, Bill Doolin, Belle Starr and their ilk. While Wellman's book continued through the death of Pretty Boy Floyd, Drago halts with the arrival of the automobile and the emergence of a new and less colorful kind of outlaw.

Even stripped of legends, the western bank and train robbers remain fascinating subjects. Drago presents them in their full flavor—daring and deadly, often cruel, frequently courageous, sometimes quixotic, usually fatalistic.

The author is not without his prejudices. Quantrill, from whom so much bloodshed stemmed, is treated with relative kindness. And Drago persists in underrating the Daltons. True, their crime spree was a brief one. But even from Drago's own account, it is apparent that the Daltons were far more than the amateurs the historian labels them. And Bill Doolin, who obviously fascinates Drago, was a product of the Dalton gang.

But casting such quibbling aside, the dean of western historians has written himself another good book that is certain to find a choice spot on the shelves of the many intrigued by the lore of an era when life was cheap and the dividing line between law officer and outlaw a slim one—and sometimes non-existent.

A VETERAN of the intelligence wars, Col. Vernon Hinchley takes advantage of his status as an insider to bare previously unpublicized aspects of some major espionage cases in his "Spy Mysteries Unveiled."

The events he discusses range from World War I through World War II on into the Cold War era. Names such as Burgess and MacLean, Franz von Papen, Gary Powers, Cicero, Dr. Karl Fuchs, Robert Soblen, Buster Crabb, Admiral Canaris and, of course, Mata Hari appear on his pages. In each case, Colonel Hinchley has one or more surprises for his readers.

The altimeter of Powers' U-2 aircraft was sabotaged before he took off from Pakistan, thus causing him to fly within range of Soviet rockets. The eight Nazis recruited by the Gestapo and landed on the American East Coast in 1942 were deliberately betrayed by a jealous Admiral Canaris, later executed as a traitor. Burgess and MacLean were simply renegades, not spies. Russian agents are armed with such fantastic weapons as cigarette cases containing what look like cigarettes but are actually miniature guns firing poisoned bullets, etc.

Hinchley anticipates one criticism of his book by apologizing for the dialogue he invents. It is, indeed, stiff and unlikely, and detracts from the authenticity of his book. His failure or inability for security or other reasons to provide corroborating evidence for most of his revelations also weakens his stories. And the ground covered is too great to permit him to probe with real depth into the various cases.

Still, spy thrillers, fact or fiction, fascinate a large part of the reading public. And there is a special exhilaration in sharing the knowledge and secrets of a member of the glamorous breed.

Sleuths & Suspense

Take a one-time sensational murder case, add a Broadway play based upon that case and season all this with a beautiful, two-timing leading lady, and you have the ingredients of a good mystery yarn.

Foley mixes them all successfully in an intriguing tale that keeps the reader guessing. The pace is fast and the plot believable despite its complexity.

A former New York debutante fights to clear her playboy brother of the murder of his unfaithful wife against damaging evidence. When things are darkest, she finds a friend in Mr. Potter, a low-pressure amateur sleuth.

They make a lovely pair, but only until the end of the story, when Potter walks off alone, presumably on to another adventure and another story from Foley's typewriter.

BLOOD ON THE STARS by Aaron Marc Stein, Crime Club, 182 pages, $3.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Tough guy Matt Erridge becomes the object of a manhunt in Texas with some ugly mercenaries for the "white supremacy" cause as his most dangerous foes.

Erridge hops back and forth across the Texas-Mexico border as he attempts to clear his name, which he does eventually after considerable bloodshed.

If you go for the "hard-boiled" suspense novel with lots of physical action and very little in the way of cerebral activity, then you might find this good escapist reading material.

A DIFFERENT TWIST on the "Ugly Duckling" fable is found in John Burningham's "Borka: The Adventures of a Goose With no Feathers." The Random House book for pre-school and first grade boys and girls is about a little goose, born featherless, who falls victim to society's disdain and suspicion of the unorthodox. Borka is the name. And she struggles hard to overcome her handicap. Eventually, Borka's adventures take her to London where a happy ending awaits her. It's a book of engaging originality with Burningham supplying both the text and the fetching watercolors that illustrate the charming story so generously.

JOE MILLER'S JESTS, or the Wits Vade-mecum, Dover Publications, 70 pages, paperback, $1. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

"Joe Miller's Jests, or, the Wits Vade-mecum" sold for a shilling when it was published by T. Read of Fleet Street in 1739.

It was a belly-busting shilling's worth of bawdy puns; but little could publisher T. Read nor writer John Mottley, who put it together, have guessed the centuries of popularity it was to attain—at least in name.

Least of all did Joe Miller guess. He was dead the year before, and had nothing to do with the little volume that gave him immortality.

The original "Joe Miller joke book" has been reproduced in facsimile by Dover Publications. And an introduction by Robert Hutchinson provides the story behind the book, as well as the story of Joe Miller himself, a Drury Lane comedian whose only connection with the book was its publisher's unauthorized use of his name.

It is a bit saddening to learn that even the first of the many Joe Miller joke books was no production of the legendary comedian, but the random scroungings of a Fleet Street hack. The cream of this sad jest is that Miller himself could neither read nor write, it being said of him that "his principal object in marrying was to have a wife who was able to read his parts to him."

As for Mottley, although he gave England (and America) a book destined to grow through "as many editions as 'Pilgrim's Progress' and to have as many readers as Milton, Chaucer, and 'The Faerie Queene' combined," he made scant fortune for himself and fame only for the man whose name he had borrowed.

Many of the 247 jokes in the original "Joe Miller" were highly topical "elegant bons mots" of the day of Walpole (and more particularly of Colley Cibber — and Alexander Pope). Their timeliness is now long gone; but there is a timelessness in others of the "brilliant jests" that strikes the 20th century funnybone quite as smartly as it did that of the 18th.

No, the original of the "who was that lady I seen you with last night" joke is not in "The Wits Vade-mecum." But the ancestor of many another familiar will be found here—faithfully preserved, no doubt, in 18th century adaptation of an even earlier funnybone-tickler.

MANUAL FOR COIN COLLECTORS AND INVESTORS by Burton Hobson and Fred Reinfeld, Sterling Publishing Co., 160 pages, $1.50. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Almost everybody wonders from time to time if some coin he receives in change is of extra value to collectors. He will likely find the answer in Burton Hobson and Fred Reinfeld's "Manual for Coin Collectors and Investors."

This book, well illustrated to help identify the coins, treats U.S. coins of the types that are not too unlikely to occasionally come to hand. The novice should be warned, however, that the prices in quotes are likely to be considerably higher than the resale figure a dealer will pay when buying coins.

Classic Whimsey

THROUGH THE ALIMENTARY CANAL WITH GUN AND CAMERA by George S. Chappell, $1; A WHIMSEY ANTHOLOGY collected by Carolyn Wells, $1.25; THE MELANCHOLY LUTE by F. P. Adams, $1; Dover Publications, paperbound. Reviewed by Barbara Hosmer.

Dover Publications has been adding to its paperbound list of humorous writings which have become classics of whimsey and humor. They're handsomely bound in heavy covers to last a while, and made up with easy-to-read print and amusing illustrations.

Chappell, the intrepid explorer, conducts the reader on a now famous and unforgettable expedition from the Facial Plain clean through the Sources of the Bile, accompanied by O. Soglow's drawings. Robert Benchley gives the introduction to this amusing account, which first met the inky juices in 1930.

The Whimsey collection is a 220-page series of witty verses and adages, rhymes and plays-on-words to delight all ages. It includes the classics of whimsey, from Lewis Carroll through Lear, W. S. Gilbert, Charles Lamb to Oliver Wendell Holmes.

FPA's collection of humorous verse, here called "The Melancholy Lute," is what he himself selected from 30 years of verse which appeared in his New York newspaper column, "The Conning Tower." These 96 poems FPA considered his best and among them are many familiar lines.

The Stereo Scene With Sunier

By JOHN SUNIER

THE EVEN DOZEN JUG BAND — Elektra Stereo EKS-7246:

The influence of country and western music has been strongly felt recently in both the jazz and folk music areas.

As the folk music craze has brought about genuine interest in the "roots" of American folk music, such as the jug bands of Kentucky and Tennessee, modern-day folkniks are copying the old styles in their performances. One of the first modern groups to ape the jug band and "old-timey" music was The New Lost City Ramblers, who can be heard on Folkways Records.

Now heah is a passel o' New York college students who are havin' themselfs a ball on the fiddles, banjo, guitar, piano, mandolin, washboard, kazoo, and, oh yes, jug. One of the piece de resistances on the lp is the "hand cornet" solo by Bob Gurland: No mouthpieces, no cornet, just Bob's hand!

My only criticism of this real fun album is that the vocals are too frequent and uncontrolled.

The short piece after which this really weird album is titled was one of the first works of musique concrete in the jazz vein. It combines the jazz piano of Martial Solal with a combo on tape which has been cut up, over-dubbed, run at different speeds and backwards to achieve fascinating transformations that still preserve the jazz beat and flavor.

A nameless girl vocalist sings a wordless "scat language" melody in the long piece "Jazz Cantata." There is more, exploring the taped dimensions of the vibes, the flute, and the drums of Kenny Clark, among others.

It is basically the shape of a long board with 13 strings set on high bridges. It is placed a few inches off the floor and plucked by the fingers of one hand. The sound is without equal, and combined with the greater approachability of the Japanese musical idiom over Chinese or other Orientals, should please the very squarest of music listeners. Some of the melodies would not sound Oriental at all if played on a more familiar instrument such as the piano.

Eto, a blind Japanese koto player now living in Southern California, devotes himself to seeing that this Japanese music gains the attention it so fully deserves. There are only three or four records available of koto music, and so this one is much appreciated.

SPRING IN CALIFORNIA

Remember how it thrilled you last year and all the years before,
this glorious spring in California?
And still you think it's this time that it thrills you more.

Feel the gentle caress of the sun?
And smell the damp black earth?
So open, eager to receive and give away so much.

See distant rain clouds?
Lingering like misty curtains over mountain tops?
And hear the birds sing?
Is your heart so happy that it almost stops?

How could it cast such utter magic time and again on you and me,
this glorious spring in California;

Crumbling Mortar Can Prove Costly

Loose and crumbling mortar in the joints between bricks should be repaired before a major financial outlay becomes necessary.

Aside from the poor appearance and general deterioration of the outside wall, the condition permits the entry of rain and moisture, with resultant damage to inside walls and ceilings.

REPLACING the loosened mortar, known among professionals as tuck pointing, can be handled by the do-it-yourselfer with reasonable efficiency if he follows certain simple fundamentals.

The first step involves cleaning out all pieces of the old mortar which have disintegrated. There is no necessity to chip out old mortar which is still in solid condition. The loose mortar can be taken out with a cold chisel, an old screwdriver or some other similar tool.

For major overhauls involving hundreds of bricks, there is a special tool for this purpose.

THE NEXT step is to thoroughly wet the area from which the loose mortar has been removed. This will prevent new mortar from drying too quickly.

You can buy ready-mixed mortar at building supply dealers, lumber yards and some hardware stores. After the mortar ingredients have been mixed while dry, add water until there is a fairly thick consistency.

If you wish to make your own mortar, mix one part of hydrated lime and one part of portland cement with five parts of sand, then add the water.

APPLY THE mortar to the joints with a pointed trowel, being sure it is packed in well. Keep a damp cloth handy to wipe off instantly any mortar which gets on the face of the bricks. It will come off easily if the wiping is done at once; it will be difficult to remove if you wait until you have completed the job.

The joints are properly finished by "striking," a term used to describe the process of pressing the trowel against the joints and drawing it across the surface of the mortar. This is done vertically, then horizontally.

WHILE ORDINARY flush joints are acceptable, a more professional look can be given to the job by making them concave.

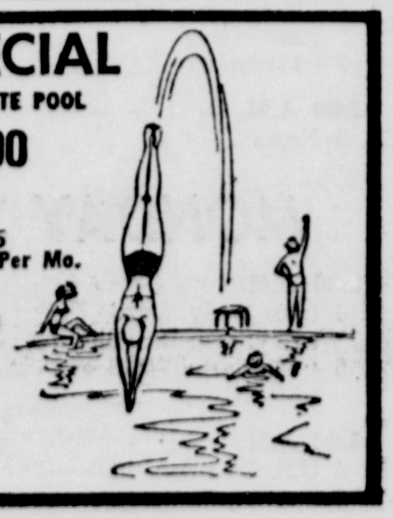

It is important that the new joints be wet down a couple of times a day for three or four days. This can be done with a wet rag, with any kind of sprayer or where a large area is to be covered, with a hose. In the latter event, be sure the pressure is not so strong that it will push some of the new mortar out of the joints before it has hardened sufficiently.

GARDENERS CHECKLIST

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Lift and divide your chrysanthemums. Or you can get the rooted cuttings from your nurseryman and set them out in good soil.
- Set out dianthus in light soil, in full sun. It is good to work some agricultural lime or gypsum into the ground first. Just dust enough over to "flour" the planting area.
- You can get carnations in plant bands and usually there will be either pictures of the carnation you'll get from the plant or there will be actual carnations for you to inspect —at nurseries.
- For part shade areas, now's the time for the English Primrose. These you should buy while in flower. You can see what color you're getting and it doesn't hurt them a bit to be moved while in bloom.

Bedding Plants Simplify Your Color Problems

Annuals Are Your Best Friends In Making An Attractive Garden

Nothing provides those brilliant splashes of color in the garden as surely as annuals. And now that the professional growers do all the hard work for you and all you have to do is set out ready-to-go bedding plants, there's no reason you should avoid these beauties.

Properly selected and planted just where you want them, these generous plants give you flowers on your table all summer and fall—some even part of the spring. And still keep your garden bright.

THERE ARE a few things you should take into consideration when you plan your plantings.

First: Mass them. Plant enough of the same flower to make a showing.

Second: Use them to brighten those places in the garden where favorite spring-flowering shrubs have stopped flowering. Use them to brighten hedges or other perennial backgrounds.

Third: Take into consideration the possibilities of their colors.

Taking the last consideration first, annuals usually divide into two groups as far as color is concerned. There are those with strong, "hot" colors—the bright reds, yellows, oranges. These will seem to come "right at you" in the garden so they can be planted in the foreground in a small garden. This keeps the garden from seeming even smaller than it is.

The other group is composed of "cool" colors—the pale yellows, pastels, pinks and the good, clear hues. These tend to give you depth, so you can plant them against the back fence, for example, to make your garden seem bigger. They seem to "go away" from you.

THE WHITES, purples, lavenders are best used for contrast. Obviously scarlet and white make an excellent contrast; so do lavender and white or blue and white. But while nature is a master at mixing unnatural colors successfully, putting purple and red together can be a gamble.

But don't worry. Just put the colors you like best together and chances are nature will take care of any blunders through her magic.

Generally speaking annuals want full sun but there are some that either prefer shade or want it, so these can do wonderful things for the northern side of your house, those narrow, shaded strips between houses, those places under trees where nothing seems to do.

The group that will take considerable shade includes cinerarias, Poor Man's Orchid, panseys and violas. All the others will want full sun or as much sun as you can give them.

THOSE OF you who want to try the newest and best should hasten to get seeds or seedlings of the new All-America Selections because, naturally, they're in great demand and tend to be sold out first. Check with your nursery store on when they will be available if they haven't come in yet.

Only silver medal winner of the year is Bonanza, a giant, cactus-flowered type of zinnia with brilliant gold yellow blooms in profusion. This F1 hybrid (F1 just means first-generation hybrid) is wonderfully hardy, as are most F1 plants, and gets to about 30 inches high with flowers about six inches across.

Fireglow Coxcomb won a bronze medal for its cardinal red blooms with all the purple bred out so they really sparkle! Incidentally, they're excellent for both cut flowers and when dried.

A SAGE won a bronze medal—this one is Evening Glow which has old rose flowers with a coral tongue, a knockout. And another zinnia won a medal, Pink Buttons with little Cupid-type flowers and a bush that grows only about 10 inches high, took a bronze medal.

A possible grouping would be zinnia Bonanza surrounded by coxcomb Fireglow or Scarlet Sage. Or you could surround white petunias with Bonanza or coxcomb Fireglow or any of the "hot color" group of plants. An unusually effective combination rarely used is coxcomb set against Burning Bush (sometimes called Summer Cypress) which has very fine, light green foliage that gradually turns crimson as fall approaches. The contrast of the plants and their foliage as well as colors is fascinating.

And don't forget the possibilities of vegetables that can serve you decoratively as well as for wonderful fresh, vitamin-packed food for the table.

TAKE A lesson from the French and plant beets for their red tops as edging plants. Carrots provide a handsome, fern-like foliage. The curly-leaf parsley goes on and on both as a good green edging (wonderful tucked among dwarf marigolds or zinnias) and as excellent table garnish. Lettuce is equally useful—the Romaine and the redleafed kinds, which fortunately, are very easy to grow.

Whatever you do, don't overlook Swiss Chard, the leaves of which are a deep handsome green and set off something like zinnia Pink Buttons very well. Put Pink Buttons in front and Bonanza behind a row of chard and you have the best of both worlds. You can keep cutting chard leaves (always from the bottom) and Pink Buttons covers up the naked stem of the chard.

The beauty of working with annual bedding plants is that your nurseryman always has a supply on hand.

WHAT AN ACHIEVEMENT for the home gardener! To be able to point with pride to an arrangement of cut flowers including each and every All-America annual winner for 1964. By starting with the small bedding plants available now at most nurseries, this can be accomplished with the greatest of ease. At the top of the arrangement: Salvia "Evening Glow" and Zinnia "Bonanza." Below, Zinnia "Pink Buttons" and Celosia "Fireglow." (California Assn. of Nurserymen photo)

The Secret Of Success Is Soil

Ask a successful gardener what his secret is, and nine times out of 10 he'll tell you it's the soil.

With a good soil, you can make most anything grow. Without it, you can water and feed, cultivate and weed until you're blue in the face and results are never what they should be.

THE MATTER of soil building then becomes the first step toward acquiring a green thumb, and once it is attended to, you know you are headed in the right direction.

Following are some tips on the subject of improving your garden soil.

Of first importance, a gardener should consider soil improvement as a long-range investment. What he puts into his soil at the start will return him rich dividends for many years to come. Hence, the cardinal rule: Don't skimp on materials and don't do a half-way job.

THE MOST important ingredient of good garden soil is organic material, or humus. This cure-all item loosens heavy clay soils and bulks up thin, sandy soils. Our land is sometimes deficient in humus material because our dry summers tend to burn up organic matter. Soil management consists of adding humus and keeping it in good condition with adequate irrigation.

Farmers often build humus by planting a cover crop and then turning it under to decompose. Home gardeners can take more direct steps. Because their soil area is small, they can indulge in humus materials that would simply be too expensive for the farmer.

What are these materials? Nothing mysterious, at all.

HUMUS BUILDING materials are simply such familiar things as manure and peat moss, leaf mold, wood shavings or sawdust and compost, which you can make yourself by letting leaves and clippings decompose in an out-of-the-way corner. We add them copiously at the start and resupply them from time to time in future years. As they break down in the soil, they become alive with bacteria which in turn make valuable ingredients available to plant life.

In sandy soils, humus not only bulks the soil up, but it adds the missing necessities of plant life. In adobe soils, humus serves to cure compaction and release imprisoned nutrients in the soil, making them readily available to hungry root systems.

This brings up another point — the fact that adobe soils are not necessarily bad. On the contrary, they are often rich in plant foods which need only to be released from the binding force of the clay. And in such cases, the gardener can call on two modern products or by-products of chemistry which our grandparents never heard of. These are vermiculite and chemical soil conditioners.

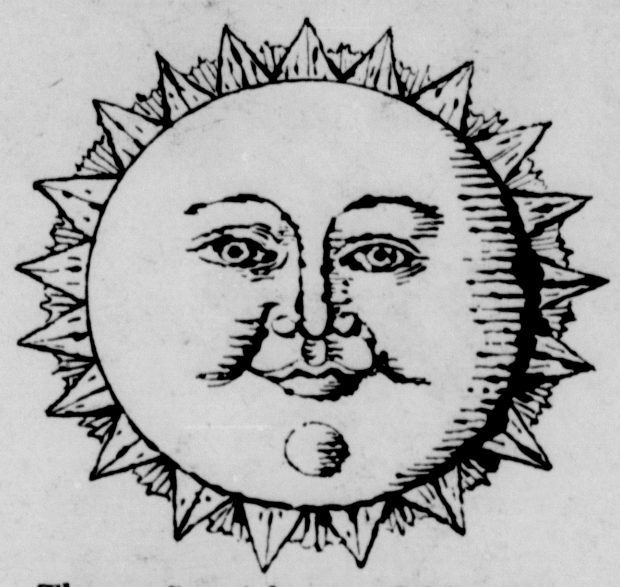

VERMICULITE is a fluffy material which has absolutely no value other than its amazing ability to retain moisture and to leaven the soil. The chemical soil conditioners, of which several are on the market, will help to keep soil loose and tillable. You first have to loosen it, though. You can't just add the conditioner to a compacted soil and expect a miracle.

Nurserymen suggest using these inert materials along with organic, humus-building manure, peat or whatever you choose in this line to improve adobe or clay soils. Humus building materials alone will suffice for sandy soils, though vermiculite will help them to retain moisture.

Except for adding fertilizer, the above steps are all you need to improve a soil that will grow anything.

They're At Home Here

One of the beauties of gardening in California is the abundance of native plants we can grow — and that are delighted to grow for us.

They range from the annuals such as Farewell-to-Spring and Rocky Mountain Garland to giant trees such as the redwoods. And one thing nearly all of them have in common is a delight is living here in their native state. That means they want you to plant them, enjoy them and leave them alone.

It is manifestly impossible to list all the natives that will do well in your garden, but some of the main ones can be discussed and the best way is to start at ground level with the native groundcover possibilities.

THE CALIFORNIA Lilac comes in a number of forms and sizes.

As a groundcover Carmel Creeper and Point Reyes are probably the most frequently used although there are others, of course. They are dense shrubs that grow from a foot to two feet high and spread out four to five feet. Their foliage is a handsome dark green, rather leathery and as they are evergreens, they provide a pleasing texture throughout the year.

Come spring, the Point Reyes variety has lavendar-blue flowers or sometimes deep blue (the exact color of the flowers depends on the selection made by the grower, but you can be sure the flowers will be an asset come spring) while the Carmel Creeper has bright blue flowers.

THESE BOTH love neglect. Plant them amout eight feet apart. Soak them in well and once they show signs of taking hold and going off on their own, leave them alone. You can really relax and enjoy these.

Manzanita also comes in a spreading form that can be used as a groundcover. The leathery leaves, shiny red stems, pink flowers come spring, then red berries in the fall provide a constant show. Again, this plant wants neglect. The Manzanita tends to get up to one and one-half feet high and spread about four feet, so you can plant these six or even seven feet apart for coverage.

THE NEXT level would be shrubs and certainly too many of the natives are without honor at home.

The Flannel Bush is one of our best, with its smiling yellow, open-faced flowers something like single roses that come in late spring and stay for a couple of months. This vigorous shrub can grow to small tree size (up to 15 feet). It makes a dense shrub with leaves that are dark green on top and whitish and "hairy" beneath. If allowed to grow high, it tends to become more open.

The Flannel Bush can be shaped but not clipped as you would a hedge plant. It is excellent for back-ground planting and particularly for those high foundations where a house is built on a hillside. The Flannel Bush is handsome enough to stand on its own but it should not be put near a lawn or any other spot where it will get much water other than that nature provides. Once you get this plant started you must leave it alone. It can go from rainy season nine months until the next rainy season without your help.

Your nurseryman will have a good selection of these excellent natives.

Wild Buckwheat may sound like a commercial crop but it is most decorative when the spikes of cloud-like pink or rose or white flowers come in late spring — and persist into September or October.

THIS SHRUB grows five or six feet high and spreads four or five feet. It makes a dense bush with gray-green foliage that makes a nice contrast when planted with California Lilac or Flannel Bush. These go well in the background or as specimen plants. The flowers can be cut and used in flower arrangements.

The California Lilac, of course, is best known and most used in shrub form and the flowers range all the way from a rich, deep blue to lavender to white (still rather rare but beginning to be available). In its various varieties, the shrub makes a bush about six to eight feet high and with a four or five-foot spread.

The Manzanita, too, comes in shrub form and one of its interesting features is "deciduous" bark. Each fall the bark begins to shred and fall and the branches take on their noted reddish quality.

THE BUSH Anemone was adopted by the English, who now consider it one of their finest flowering shrubs — and it is a good one. The flowers, a brilliant, open-faced white, look something like anemones and come in June, July, August. They are fragrant and are sometimes called California Mock Orange. These make excellent specimen plants and will take trimming if needed. The foliage is dark green and narrow. These are excellent for foundation plantings and make good contrast plants.

At tree level we again meet the California Lilac, but here it has an open habit rather than the dense shrubby look and its limbs are greenish and quite interesting. It has even been used lately as a small, round-topped tree for street plantings and because it is very hardy and sturdy as well as handsome, it is doing quite well.

MANZANITA, of course, is best known as a small tree, to about 12 feet.

But one of our most important native trees of garden size is the Toyon or California Holly. This rounded but somewhat open tree has holly-like foliage and good berries for use at Christmas time — plus clusters of white blossoms in June.

But whatever native you use, take care to let it do all the work — and let you relax.

BRIGHT EYES is both a description of the little girl and the name of the phlox which make up her bouquet. The easily-grown annual is perfect as a cut flower. Then there are also the taller perennial phloxes.

Real Beauty In The Garden Is Result Of Good Planning

Beauty in the garden can be accidental—but it's usually the result of good planning. For it is not enough for the flowers and shrubs that you like to look well when blooming, they have to like the same treatment to really "go together."

If you like plants that give you an upswept feeling, that lead the eye skyward, you can combine the many sword-shaped foliage items.

New Zealand Flax, which forms a substantial clump and has strap-shaped "leaves" that get six to eight feet long, looks something like an oversized Mother-in-Law or Snake Plant such as you may have growing in a pot indoors. New Zealand Flax does have large red flowers but it is grown for its foliage, which is either blueish green or variegated (yellow and green) or bronze.

THIS CAN be grouped with the Dracaena Palm, which shoots up a rough, darkish trunk as high as 15 feet with tufts of foot-long or even longer sword-like leaves; the Bearded Iris and various forms of Stonecrop or Sedum, as it is being called more frequently these days.

The Bearded Iris, of course has the sword-shaped leaves as well as magnificent iris blooms in the spring or summer. The Stonecrops or Sedums create the contrast as they cling to the ground and have fleshy, highly-colored yellow leaves of a rounded nature yet they seem to blend well with the thrusting, heat-loving Flax, Dracaena and Iris.

These all have these things in common: They want to be kept on the dry side; they all want good drainage; they want only casual watering—soaking at intervals of several weeks or a month; will take all kinds of abuse; all love the sun, the hotter the better; all perform best if given some lime in the soil before planting — about four pounds per 100 square feet; and all like to be left alone once planted.

ANOTHER sun-loving group that can put on a spectacular show in season (summer and fall) is the Red Hot Pokers and Gazanias.

If you have thought of the Red Hot Pokers as only red and orange spikes on big "pineapple" plants that indeed look like glowing coals at the end of a rod, you should catch up on developments. They now come in white, orange, yellow or bicolors mixing the hot orange and red or yellow and red. The Gazanias have been hybridized a good deal so that there is a wide range of colors these days ranging from white through all shades of red and orange and yellow even to lavendar . These are daisy-like flowers that stand well up above their foliage, reaching eight to 12 inches high and when the sun is bright and hot they simply cover the earth with sparkling beauty. They are excellent as a groundcover on parking strips or gentle slopes with the Red Hot Pokers as accents, giving a sudden height change. The larger the space this combination is spread over the more impressive it is but for effect you should have at least a three by 10-foot area.

These, too, love the sun and heat—but will get along with nearly any reasonable (and some rather unreasonable) conditions. They must have good drainage and once established the best thing is to leave them alone. Plant the Pokers about 18 inches apart; the Gazanias about 12 to 14 inches apart. If you keep the soil between the newly set out plants slightly loose they will spread more quickly. Otherwise you should not do anything to these plants.They want neglect.

Those Overgrown Foundations Mark A Neglected Home

They hark back to a time when landscapers seemed to think the primary thing was to hide the lines of a house. And hide them they do — to the point of almost hiding the house itself in extreme cases.

Of course, there's a certain element of neglect which figures in most overgrown plantings, but landscapers today use materials which remain at modest heights in spite of neglect. Low-growing plants which help to form a base to the house and tie it into the terrain are what we emphasize for foundation plantings in this day and age.

The California Assn. of Nurserymen claims that almost 50 per cent of the houses in any older neighborhood need new foundation plantings. This may be high for a given neighborhood, but it will average out over the area, and it is extremely low in the areas of worst offense.

IF YOUR foundation is overgrown and unsightly, you are faced with two possibilities:

One is to try drastic pruning measures, but this seldom gives permanent satisfaction for the offending shrubs will only grow right back up, or try to.

The second and best solution is to hook a rope to the car and rip the blighters out. You may feel the gardener's traditional abhorrence for uprooting any established planting, but in the long run, you'll be glad you did.

Once you have the foundation strip cleared, what then? The next step is to consult with your local nurseryman about plant materials to replant it with. Some better possibilities for California gardens follow.

The low-growing junipers are among the best for modern foundations. Such popular varieties as San Jose Juniper and Tamarix Juniper make permanent low plantings which need little or no shaping and pruning as the years pass. Juniper conferta (Shore Juniper) is ideal along the coast. The taller, spreading Pfitzer Juniper may be a bit large for most foundation plantings, but there are several Pfitzer variations, one of them a compact form which is well worth trying.

TALLER JUNIPERS such as the Hollywood Twisted Juniper are used for accent on the corners of a foundation planting. The juniper pfitzer aurea is good for contrast.

Most gardeners shy away from uniformity in foundation plantings, but there is nothing inherently wrong with uniformity when properly applied. You could do far worse, for instance, than to anchor your house in an unbroken row of low-growing junipers. A leading landscape architect points with pride to a single row of clipped boxwood with which he separated one house from its lawn. The boxwood itself is separated from the house by a foot or more of brick paving and the whole effect is one of simple dignity.

Other compact shrubs which fit easily into a foundation planting are the new dwarf Heavenly Bamboo, which has the same lacy foliage of its larger counterpart; the India Hawthorns, especially the new varieties Enchantress, Springtime and Coates Crimson which give masses of rose and pink flowers respectively through most of the first half of each new year; and for shaded foundations, such things as azaleas and camellias.

THESE ARE only a drop in the bucket, however. There are many, many more to be found in nurseries.

There are times when a bed of ivy is all one needs for a foundation planting, provided he lends substance by judicious use of an occasional shrub such as dwarf Mugho Pine, or when called for, a columnar evergreen such as Yew Pine or Juniper. The deliciously fragrant Star Jasmine may also be used as a ground-cover-foundation in this way. To keep it in a mounding, prostrate form, simply tack its arms down at intervals or weight them with rock and string.

Trees are not properly part of the foundation planting, but they must be considered at the same time. A tree or two—one at the corner of the house, another set off from a corner—can enhance the setting and give the foundation planting a big assist in making a house seem at home in its surroundings.

THE MORNING GLORY isn't always a vine. Here's the bush-type Royal Ensign which has true ultra-marine flowers with white halos surrounding the yellow throats. Sweetpeas, too, come in bush varieties, if you can find them.

Such an attitude is not only erroneous, it's downright dangerous. For carried to extremes, it could spell the decline of a California landmark.

If oaks seem slow to grow, it's usually because they lack the necessary aids to growing. We boost most shrubs and trees along with plenty of water and an occasional helping of food, but whoever heard of watering an oak—or even worse, feeding it? Oaks are supposed to shun moisture and even succumb to it. And feeding it is just plain unheard of.

But the California Assn. of Nurserymen is not in agreement. The right kind of watering will help an oak as much as any tree, and food is just as well received. Small oaks from containers can become mighty trees in an amazingly short time.

An oak tree's roots should never be allowed to stand in moisture, so plant one only where drainage is good — or raise the planting area by boxing it. And always keep moisture away from the crown of the trunk. Crown rot is apt to develop where permanently wet soil stands around the trunk. Use a soaker and water slowly and deeply.

As for feeding, use a complete plant food, starting a few months after planting and repeating applications twice a year during the tree's early years.

AN IDEAL CONTAINER plant is the Weeping Cedar. But it can also spread out to a width of 15 feet, and since it seldom gets taller than six feet, it can serve as an off-the-earth groundcover in your yard. It is also something of a conversation piece. (Independent-Journal photo)

Camellia Deserves Popularity

When the camellia was first introduced to America from the Orient in the mid-19th century, no one dreamed it would become such an important and beautiful addition to the flower gardens throughout the land, but that's exactly what happened. And no wonder, because few other plants are as hardy and yet bear such opulent flowers and lush green foliage as does the camellia.

The camellia is one of a select species of flowers which command an immense following of garden clubs and societies whose members have an unwavering devotion to its propagation.

UNDER THE proper conditions, camellias can soar to a height of 35 feet and still retain their fresh, verdant beauty. And there is no finer species of plant that can be espaliered with such beauty and control.

Cut properly and tied to a trellis with plastic covered wire available at any nursery, the camellia ran be espaliered to take round, square, vertical, horizontal, symmetrically crossed and a number of other artistic and geometric shapes.

To begin with, camellias thrive in acid soil which is rich in humus and friable. They like humid atmosphere and 30 degrees freezing weather doesn't particularly affect them.

Their tolerance to sunshine varies, but in general, shade produces heavier foliage while sunshine increases the number of blossoms.

CONTRARY TO common belief, camellias are low maintenance plants, especially if proper soil conditions are created when first planted. This includes spading in liberal amounts of peat moss, oak, pine, or redwood leaf mold and especially providing good drainage.

Camellias should never be cultivated near the trunk because cultivation disturbs the fine feeder roots which lie in the top few inches of soil. Because a camellia can suffer if the feeder roots are damaged, care must be taken during the first two years of growth to insure the plant toppling over from the weight of its extremely heavy blossoms.

THIS CAN BE prevented by pushing a bamboo or redwood stake into the ground near the trunk and twisting a plastic covered wire plant tie around the camellia and the stake at several levels. The ties can easily be readjusted as the camellia matures. The stake may be removed after the "caliper" or girth of the trunk is heavy enough to support the plant from wind and from its own weight.

When they are blooming, camellias can be used for anything from a lovely corsage to a formal dinner table center piece . . . and they generally are.

Some 'Bread-And-Butter' Shrubs

C any guide to landscaping in California and you will find certain shrubs which are mentioned over and over again.

You find them recommended for foundations, for borders, for patio plantings and even, occasionally, for use in containers. These are bread and butter shrubs in the nursery trade, shrubs which have stood the test of time to gain their popularity.

ONE OF THE top members of this exclusive list is the Heavenly Bamboo, also called Sacred Bomboo in its native China. It is not a bamboo, but it looks enough like one to deserve the nickname.

Heavenly Bamboo has the same feathery appearance as real bamboo, sending up canes from which a lacy foliage branches out. As time passes, these clumps become overcrowded with canes, and the gardener should remove a few by cutting them off at the base to preserve the graceful looks.

Heavenly Bamboo is primarily green in color, but its leaves are ever tinged with bronze and in fall they take on even brighter hues of bronze and red. Even along the coast you get some lovely autumn displays from Heavenly Bamboo.

IN SPRING, the Heavenly Bamboo produces large clusters of small white flowers which are followed by berries that turn bright red in fall. In coastal gardens, temperatures are not always warm enough to insure good berry set, but inland, the berries are a big addition to the fall show.

Heavenly Bamboo grows to four or five feet in height. A dwarf variety is also available which stays only half that height. Try it in tubs for an attractive display, or use it wherever else in the garden you will.

Another shrub which stands near the top of our "most widely used" list is Oregon Grape, one of several useful members of the Holly Grape family. The Oregon Grape boasts glossy foliage which is not at all unlike the foliage of a holly or an oak. In spring it puts forth bright clusters of yellow bloom and these are followed by the blue-black "grapes" which give the family its common name.

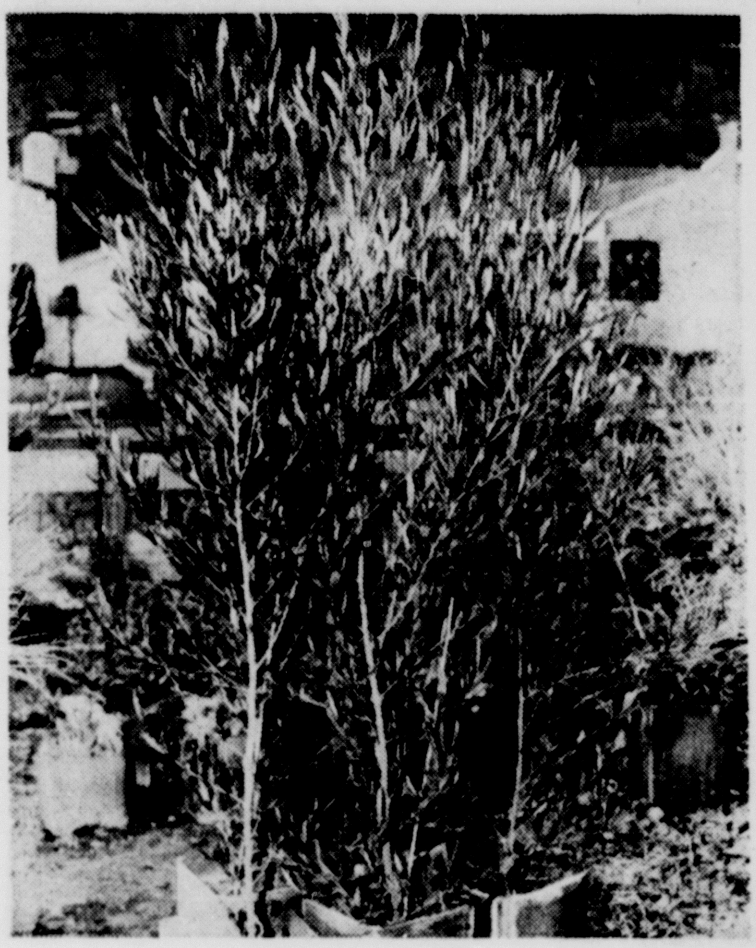

THE OREGON Grape is an ever-changing picture in the garden. In spring its new growth is a ruddy, bronze color and, of course, the spring bloom adds its splash of yellow. In summer, some of the mature leaves take on bright red coloring and as the berries mature, they become ever more a deep blue-black. Then, in fall, the red or coppery coloring becomes even more pronounced until you might think that here is a deciduous shrub which is coloring up before dropping its leaves. You'd be wrong to think it, though, for Oregon Grape is an evergreen, albeit a chameleon type of evergreen.

Third on our list is the Lily-of-the-Valley Shrub, a graceful, slightly drooping shrub of considerable merit. It will do well wherever you plant it if you give it plenty of peat moss and leaf mold in the soil.

Lily-of-the-Valley Shrub is worth any extra attention which might be needed at planting time. Its deep evergreen foliage and irregular growth patterns make it a shrub of distinction at any season, but in spring, when its myriad sprays of white or pinkish urn-shaped flowers are out, it is truly a thing of beauty. These blooms look enough like Lillies of the Valley to warrant the shrubs common name. Like the Heavenly Bamboo, it can be grown anywhere, including a tub.

A FOURTH member of our "most used" club — perhaps the most widely used of all— is the ever faithful Glossy Abelia. When a gardener needs a friend, here it is, always clean and fresh in appearance, loaded with pink or white flowers through summer and into fall, indifferent to the gardener's attention or the type of soil in which it is planted.

Abelias are most attractive when pruned selectively, by removing branches completely to open up the shrub. They can be sheared like any hedge, however, and if you want a flowering hedge, abelia is one of the best. A medium height shrub, it also fits foundation or border and none will give you more for less. Be sure of that.

THE PINK HOPBUSH is an attractive pyramidal shrub which retains the purplish bronze color of its foliage throughout the year. Its flowers are pink. Ordinarily, the bush grows from six to 10 feet tall, and is extremely resistant to both sun and wind. (Independent-Journal photo)

The First Bloom Is The Best

The first blooms of spring are always the most exciting. You go out one crisp, sunny day and there are the first buds opening. The gardener's pulse is always quickened by these encounters with a new season.

In Marin, of course, these first signs of spring come early—often before winter is at its mid-point.

The California Assn. of Nurserymen gives a nod to the flowering quince as being among the best bets for an early, early spring. And one of the nicer points in their favor is that quinces continue blooming through several weeks.

YOU SEE the first color from flowering quince shortly after the new year is ushered in. They do not swing into full bloom until February, however. For indoor decoration, they can be picked in the bud stage and brought into the warmth of the home where they will then open their buds and bloom.

Clarke's Giant, a large-flowered double red variety, is a favorite of long standing. Other reds include Texas Scarlet and Stanford Red. Snow, as the name implies, is a pure white quince of great delicacy in bloom, while the varieties Minerva, Charming and Pink Lady come in varying shades of pink or rose. You'll find others too, for over the years, a long line of excellent seedlings has been developed.

WHEN DAPHNE starts blooming in late winter, we are treated to one of the most enjoyable shows in the garden world. Not only are the waxy pink blooms appealing to look at, but their fragrance is something out of this world. A dish full of daphne blooms will fill your house with their wonderful perfume. A single flower worn in a button hole will keep you happy through the day.

There are several daphne varieties available for the garden, but the one you will want for an early spring is the widely grown Winter Daphne, so named here in California because of its bloom season. Actually it is a spring flower in most parts of the country.

The India Hawthorns are also as early as January in California gardens, producing lovely pink heads of bloom that are delicately scented if you get up close and sniff. And now nurserymen offer refined new versions of this shrub including the superb "Springtime" and "Enchantress," recommended heartily for sun or part sun, in any soil and with any degree of care.

THERE ARE many good shrubs in the osmanthus family, but one that gives the most bloom is the Delavay Osmanthus. In late winter it is covered with small white flowers not as fragrant as its cousin, the Sweet Olive, but far showier. This is an excellent shrub for tubbing on a sunny south terrace or deck, and one which gives you spring-like bloom as early as anything available at the nursery.

Camellias are an obvious choice for bringing spring early, and while they start blooming in fall, the bulk of them are just now reaching their peaks. The varieties are so numerous as to defy listing. We suggest you simply stop in at a nursery and choose the ones you like. Or better, perhaps, choose as many as you can afford. You'll like all of them.

The Popularity Of Container Gardening Is Increasing

Merchants in many California cities have discovered that large containers offer an easy way to grow medium size street trees and thereby beautify their shops. Home gardeners have discovered that containers offer a chance to have year-round color in strategic garden areas.

Apartment dwellers seem ever more aware of the container as a means for gardening on decks and balconies.

Container gardens offer the imaginative person an unlimited challenge, too. In the choice of materials for making the containers and in the choice of plant material to plant in them, he has a golden opportunity to let his imagination run wild — to play like a mad musician, so to speak.

If you visit a florist or nurseryman, you will find a wide assortment of containers for garden and deck use. The most popular in California are those made from redwood. However, terra cotta and various ceramic pots are also widely used.

Soy tubs, pre-cast concrete containers, plastic bowls and wire baskets are also to be found in nurseries and all of them present a challenge, so far as planting is concerned.

In selecting plant material your choice is almost unlimited. You realize after visiting a nursery that anything will grow in containers. It's simply a matter of choosing the right combinations and getting the most color or beauty for your money.

THE PEACH is not the most popular fruit tree in Marin. It normally needs a somewhat warmer climate for ideal growing conditions. But nurserymen handling the Bonanza, billed as "the world's smallest fruiting-flowering peach tree," report that this handsome little tree is being grown with fine success in this county. The flowers are a radiant pink, the peaches full-size freestone fruit. And you never have to reach up to pick a peach. (Color photo courtesy of Armstrong Garden Color Library.)

Location Check

When plunging your house plants outdoors in their clay pots, be sure and locate them according to their individual sunshine preferences. Geranium plants, for example, prefer sun, while fuchsias are better off in shady spots.

It Isn't Hard To Please

African Violet Does Not Need Expert's Care

THIS 50-YEAR-OLD Black Mission Fig at the West End Nursery, San Rafael, serves as a striking example of what can be done in the espaliering of fruit trees. Not only is it an eye-catcher as an ornamental, but it is also a prolific bearer of fruit. The same results can be accomplished in espaliering with virtually any of our popular fruit trees. (Independent-Journal photo)

It is very fortunate indeed that Baron Walter von Saint Paul, a vanilla and India-rubber plantation owner in Usambara, North East Tanganyika, Territory of East Africa, cared for more than vanilla and rubber.

Before the turn of the century the good baron discovered a delightful little plant growing in wooded places in the fissures of limestone rocks where quantities of decaying vegetable matter—what we call humus—had lodged.

HIS FATHER in Germany, to whom the baron sent plants, also reported that these little "Usambara violets"" were found by his son growing in the primeval forest of Numbara, in the shade, on granite rocks.

These little plants, of course, are the ancestors of one of our most popular and rewarding house plants, variously known as the African Violet or Santpaulia in honor of the baron.

A good deal of time, a number of other discoveries and a tremendous amount of professional and amateur breeding have produced a whole range of African Violets today that—luckily for us—are easier to grow than the original somewhat temperamental ones. Our modern ones also flower almost constantly.

YOU DO NOT have to be an expert to grow African Violets, nor do you have to make a hobby of growing them to enjoy this useful little (some do get pretty large after a few years) houseplant that likes conditions not very different from those we humans favor.

If you are not familiar with the African Violet, you can visit almost any nursery or florist shop for enlightment. The ones you grow are identical with those you see in florists' windows.

Since 1893, when it first flowered in Europe, the blue "violets" have become white, blue, deep purple, various shades of pink and the form of the violet-like flowers has become ruffled and double as well as simple, star-shaped.

THE WHOLE plant gives the most tropical effect and when properly grown you have flowers virtually all year—although now and then a plant will take a well-earned rest for a few days or weeks, but not longer if grown well.

If you have air conditioning, Arican Violets love it.

More and more of us use fluorescent light somewhere in the house or basement. African Violets love it. In fact, if you want to have a whole stable of potted plants in bloom at all seasons and ready for use as table decorations or to brighten a window sill or kitchen, put a timer attachment to your fluorescent light (two 40-watt lights are excellent for a four-foot bench) and set it so the African Violets get 12 hours of light a day. The results will startle you.

ACTUALLY, you don't have to do anything special to have wonderful African Violets provided you start out properly. That means buying only quality plants in top health.

If you need to repot, get properly treated soil from your nurseryman—don't take it out of the garden. It will have the proper amount of humus, sand ,etc., and he will also have a good soluble plant food that is especially designed for African Violets. Follow the label's instructions.

Now all you need is some type of shallow pan which you can fill with pebbles (white ones are excellent for emphasizing the beauty of foliage and flowers). Put water in the pan so it is well below the top of the rocks and place your pot on this rocky bed. This will insure moist atmosphere.

WATERING? The soil should feel moist to your finger but never be wet. They can't stand to have their feet wet so so never let the pot stand in the water, or if you are using a bed of rocks under the pots, don't let the water touch the bottom of the pots. It is essential that the water be room temperature and that you do not get water on the leaves.

For light, put them where they get plenty of light but no direct sun through a window. Some people even take their plants outdoors in summer, placing them where no wind or direct sun hits them. Do this only when night temperatures get no lower than 55 degrees—and day or night not over 85 degrees.

While the African Violet is decorative enough to need no help, it does combine very well with some of the fancy-leaved Begonias, with its cousin, the Gloxinia, with philodendrons, ferns and the like to create a beautiful indoor jungle effect. Do not be afraid to try various combinations.

Hunt The Quince

You might take this opportunity to explore your nursery for the flowering quince of your choice. They should be in flower now and there are some new forms on the market you might like. Some of the new ones are more dwarf than the older varieties—if size is important in your garden.

It's A Great Day For Planting A Tree

March 7 Is The Date; See That You Observe It Right

March 7 is the birthday of California's famed horticulturist, Luther Burbank, and, since 1909, the state has celebrated it as Arbor Day.

Traditionally, Arbor Day has been observed by school children who study about conservation and occasionally plant trees. Many's the weathered old tree that stands today as a living reminder of some class project on some long gone Arbor Day.

The California Assn. of Nurserymen has also suggested that Arbor Day today can also serve as an impetus to beautify our cities.

WHAT BETTER reason for getting together with neighbors to plan a street planting, or for organizing support of a city project to plant trees in the business district? If such a project is lacking, propose it yourself as a club or association project.

Trees—in the garden, along the street, in city squares and parks—provide a background of serenity to the fast pace of modern living. They are enduring and reassuring. They shade us in summer and protect us from the glare of high noon. They are mighty nice to have around.

Since a tree's performance depends largely on the start it gets in life, the gardener should take extra care in planting one. Whether it's a towering shade tree or a flowering fruit tree, you should provide an adequate planting hole.

One nurseryman told us how to determine the proper size of a planting hole. "Dig one that seems plenty big enough," he said, "then make it bigger."

THIS IS NOT to say that it takes a potential swimming pool to plant a tree, but the hole should be a foot deeper than the root ball and a foot wider all around. Mix the earth you've taken out with steer manure before filling it back in. Make a basin and fill it first thing. Provide plenty of water during the first year.

For A Showy Vine, Try This Honeysuckle

Fast growing and lush, it will cover the wall of a house in one good season. The tubular (and fragrant) blooms are up to five or six inches long, and a nice contrast to the large, glossy leaves.

PICK A TREE . . . any tree . . . and plant it on Arbor Day next Saturday to commemorate Luther Burbank's birthday. The famous naturalist would have approved the camphor tree shown here. It is a popular evergreen shade tree, slow growing to about 50 feet. It has a handsome compact form and light green foliage that takes on unusual bronze tints in spring. It is a good selection for a street planting, since it is not overly fussy about soil and water variables. (California Assn. of Nurserymen photo)

An Idea Fair For Gardens

One of the main reasons thousands visit the Marin Art and Garden Fair in Ross each summer is that, during the colorful event, the Marin Art and Garden Center grounds become an outdoor treasure house of landscaping and gardening ideas.

The "green thumb" enthusiast, or the householder who prefers to hire someone else to bring his garden dreams to realization, has only to stroll past the beautiful exhibits to pick up a wealth of ideas applicable to his own home.

Then the theme was "Contemporary Moods."

The 1964 fair, to be held July 1 through July 5, will have as its theme: "In the Medieval Manner." Charles Hoeppner of Mill Valley will be the designer. And once again, the leading professional and amateur landscapers will share with fair visitors their conceptions of how the ordinary garden can be made extraordinary. Mark the dates. And take along a pencil and note pad to jot down some of the many original ideas you will encounter.

THE JAPANESE INFLUENCE is felt keenly in Northern California landscaping and gardening, and was reflected at the 1963 Marin Art and Garden Fair at the Marin Art and Garden Center, Ross, with its "Contemporary Moods" theme. Harry Saburamaru of Cotati designed a contemporary Japanese wall garden with teahouse for his exhibit. Plantings and groundcovers reflect the spirit of serenity which is essential in the successful Oriental garden setting.

THE INTEREST OF VISITORS to the 1963 Marin Art and Garden Fair in the big hanging basket chair that was the focal point of the West End Nursery of San Rafael exhibit was apparent. Richard K. Untermann was the designer. He offered a lanai or sitting area for relaxation that was constructed of California redwood. Creeping juniper and pebbles served as groundcovers. 'Mums, star jasmine and osamanthis were also to be seen in the display.

THE USE OF WALLS with exposed aggregate and with bench of the same materials made the display plot set up by Norman Black of El Marin Florist, Mill Valley, a real attention-catcher. Black also made effective use of textured pottery, a multitude of cut flowers, Birds of Paradise, glads, antherium and 'mums in setting up a most attractive contemporary garden. (Photos by Ken Molino)

A STRIKINGLY DIFFERENT kind of teahouse dominated the Japanese setting which landscaper George Murata of San Rafael created for the 1963 Marin Art and Garden Fair. The walk curves softly and the rock and plantings are traditionally Japanese—yet fit in well with the contemporary theme.

AN ATTRACTIVE FEATURE of the George Murata exhibit was this cool, serene waterfall. Moss, fern and rocks enhanced the setting. The Murata display also included a wooden bridge not pictured on these pages. The point that water and small structures can lift any garden out of the ordinary was well made.

WITH PLANNING

You Can Enjoy Color All Year

Any Marin gardener who dedicates himself to the goal can have color the year around in his garden. Not always the lush color of spring and summer, to be sure, but color nonetheless and more often plentiful than not.

There are many tools by which this 12-month succession of bloom can be achieved. You can make use of bulbs through at least nine months of the year; annuals through all 12.

AND THERE are shrubs, vines and perennials to lend permanence, some of them near ever blooming themselves.

The California Assn. of Nurserymen suggests that you take the seasons one by one, starting with spring, and see how year-round bloom can become a reality in your garden.

Right now, for instance, you can find quick color in the form of camellias and azaleas, two standbys of the spring garden in all parts of the state. Both are easily transplanted in full bloom from nursery containers. Right now, also, you will find blooming shrubs of Star Magnolia, the white canopy of which combines beautifully with the vividly colored azaleas.

LOOK FURTHER. The exotic Bird of Paradise is full of color this month and a star attraction. Pink India Hawthorn is another color bearer which will give you color from the first day you plant it. Dogwood will soon be in bloom and by setting it out now, you can take full advantage of its lovely spring show.

Plant also for future springs: Flowering fruit trees, Saucer Magnolia, acacias, and such vines as the evergreen Armand Clematis or a Wisteria. Then mark your calendar for next October so you won't forget to plant those spring-flowering bulbs which can brighten the season more than anything else.

Annual and perennial bedding plants should have gone in before this for spring bloom, but if you hurry, you will get color from some of them before the calendar turns to summer.

NOW FOR THE late spring and summer show:

Roses are still available bareroot and will give you bloom from May until November. These can be the backbone of your garden or they can merely act as fillers in a sunny border. Plant any number from one to 30 roses and you'll probably wish you planted more.

Pelargoniums, including the common zonal geraniums, ivy geranium and the Martha Washington pelargoniums, are nowhere better adapted than in Marin. From late spring well into fall and often beyond, they will produce a dazzling array of blooms. Marguerite will also yield up bushels of yellow daisies through most of late spring, summer and fall. Often they keep blooming right through winter.

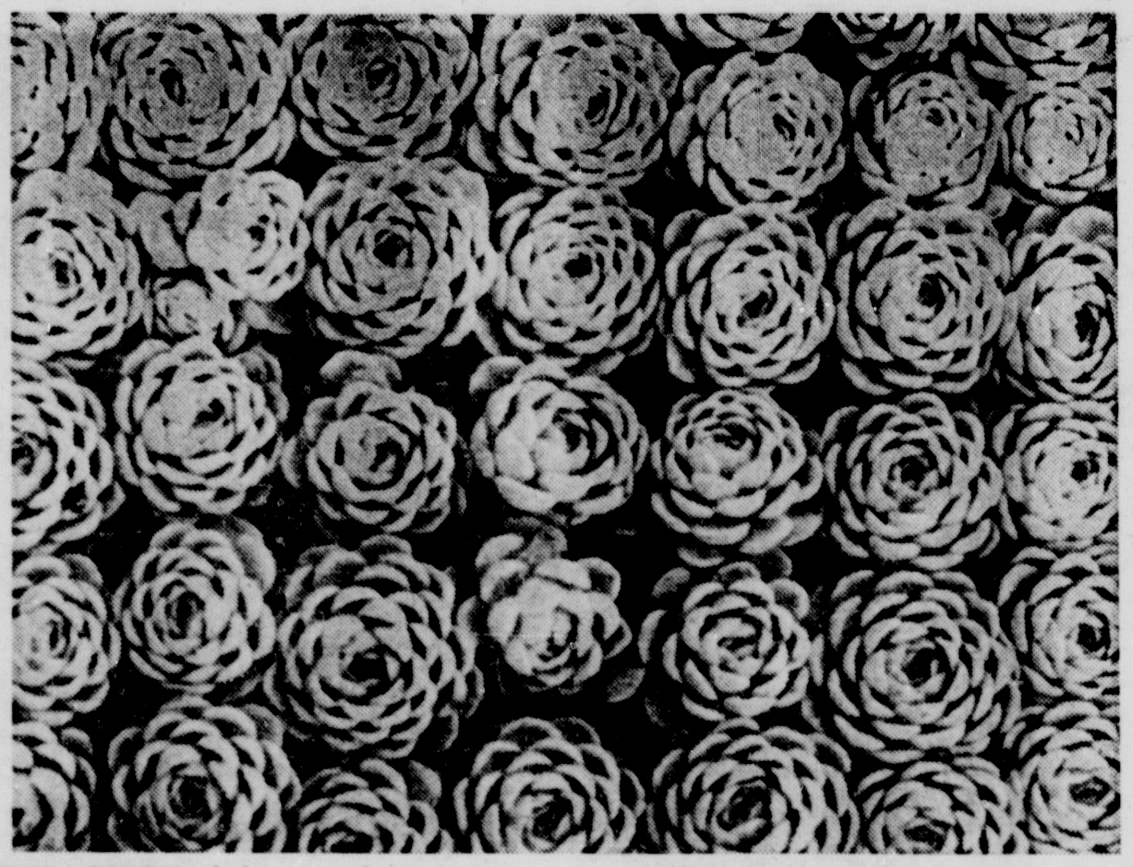

Annuals should still be planted for their vivid summer display. You have an unlimited choice this month and next, so don't be shy about using them. Among the bulbs, gladiolus and tuberous begonias are due for planting this month, while dahlias should start going in around April 1. These three summer friends alone can carry quite a color load, lasting well into fall.

AMONG SUMMER's finest shrubs in addition to roses are: Fuchsias, oleander, Bottle Brush, escallonia, abelia, hibiscus, Crape Myrtle and gardenia. There's no problem of selection. The only problem is fitting them all in.

For autumn and winter, Marinites have things all over gardeners in other less favored climates.

As in most places, chrysanthemums put on a lavish display, but unlike most other places, they are accompanied by a host of color companions. Fuchsias bloom well into fall, as do many other summer holdovers. They are joined by the vividly colored berry bushes such as Pyracantha and Cotoneaster and by felicia, the dainty Blue Marguerite, which does its best to bloom 12 months of every year.

THIS VERSION of that succulent so popular in Marin, Hens and Chicks, is somewhat paler in its coloration than the varieties most commonly seen. The succulent is ideal for growing in a strawberry bowl or similar small container on the patio, or as a garden border. (Independent-Journal photo)

Annuals are the really unique members of our autumn winter parade in Marin, and the thing to remember is to plant them in time — in summer for fall bloom, in the earliest days of fall for winter bloom.

There are many others for all seasons.

ENGLISH LAUREL is an ideal choice for Marinites as a screen shrub. Its large leaves, very glossy foliage and white flowers make it an attractive addition to any landscape. And it is especially adept at withstanding heat. (Independent-Journal photo)

To Tame The Winds

And Protect The Outdoor Living Area

In the cooler months, especially, it can take what little warmth there is right out of the sunshine, and even in summer, it can drive a man to shelter.

March is often windy and a good month, therefore, to turn up the need for a windbreak in the garden. When March winds start to blow you can get a good idea of how protected or unprotected your own outdoor living area really is.

And don't think March is the only month to worry about. It may get the publicity, but wind is wherever you find it during the rest of the year, too.

A recent note from the California Assn. of Nurserymen points up the problem of wind and suggests several shrubs which can be planted to combat it. Their selection depends largely on how much space you have. But one or another of the following should fill your need of a windbreak.

IN THE SMALL garden, you could do no better than to plant one of the privets and let it grow up to a commanding height. Japanese Privet is a good choice and so is the Glossy Privet. These are large-leaf varieties compared to those most commonly used in hedging, handsome as can be with highly polished foliage and full, sturdy growth.

You can prune these to hedgelike formality or let them shrub out in a less formal manner. For screens and windbreaks, we recommend the less formal treatment. Formal shearing, however, will make them suitable for more cramped quarters.

The Australian Brush Cherry makes a fine tall screen for sheltering the living area of a garden. It, too, can be sheared to limited spaces, but it is really more handsome when permitted to grow less formally. The glossy, small leaves, tinged with reddish bronze make a colorful backdrop for outdoor living.

The small, purplish fruit are edible but no great delicacy. You'll probably find you can live without them.

ENGLISH LAUREL is a handsome shrub with big, glossy leaves, densely carried on its branches. Left to its own, it will shrub out to make a rounded form several feet wide. It can also be pruned to a more formal shape, but true formality is not for the English Laurel. Pruned or unpruned, however, it makes a wonderful windbreak and screen for the small garden. English Laurel is one of the best tall screens you can plant in California.

Last but far from least is that shrub of so many uses, the Victorian Box. As a wide, informal screen, Victorian Box has few equals. Its undulating foliage, a glossy, deep green, has both eye appeal and the density to provide good shelter from prevailing winds. Be sure to top it at the desired height so that its tendency to grow up into a small tree form will be thwarted. It stands shearing but is more attractive when allowed to shrub out some.

The delightful thing about Victorian Box is the heavenly perfume which its small white blossoms dispense each spring and to some extent throughout summer. The fragrance is less intense than jasmine but strong enough to fill the air on friendly spring nights. Small fruits or seed pods follow the flowers, turning from green to an attractive shade of orange in the fall.

WHILE WE have considered these shrubs as windbreaks only, it should be noted that they serve to screen out unwanted views and to give privacy also. These two goals are just as important to enjoyment of the outdoor living area as is a lack of wind.

The matter of privacy, especially, should be a prime consideration, for nothing dampens the pleasure of a barbecue more than the lack of privacy. Even the wind is better than trying to entertain guests in full view of the neighbors or passersby.

Don't Plant Weeds

Don't plant weeds in the lawn, says the Lawn Institue. Choose lawn seed of high quality, under reliable brand. Quality seed mixes will not only have cleaner, weed-free seed, but include only grasses that are fine-textured.

THIS UGLY FELLOW is one of the Marin gardener's most persistent foes. And as long as spring rains fall, you can expect the snail to be around, hungry and nibbling at your young plants. The answer: Keep the bait out for him and his cousin, the slug, another hated pest.

ORIENTAL landscaping and structures are especially adaptable to quiet corners of our Marin gardens, where they serve many of us as tranquil retreats. The shelter and bridge seen here are made of California redwood which, because of its beauty and durability in an unpainted state, is ideal for the natural forms and finishes of Japanese garden structures. The Showy Begonia Is A Prima Donna

She's showy enough to go it alone and, in fact, it would be a mistake to put some other plant in competition with her. Spear-bearers, yet, but no other sopranos, please.

It may come as a pleasant surprise to you that this magnificent gift of nature is quite easy to grow, not temperamental as some of the lesser prima donnas. You do, of course, have to provide suitable growing conditions. Again, these are not difficult.

If you are not familiar with the tuberous-rooted begonia, go to your nearest nursery and look at the pictures on the bins where the tubers are kept. The reality, this time, will exceed the picture's promise. A single tuber grown in an eight-inch clay pot will give you pleasure until fall, but if you have space, you can compound this delight by getting many tubers.

NOW THE temptation will be to take one tuber of each kind—the red, yellow, pink, salmon, white, etc.; the ruffled, the single, the double, etc. There are so many varieties and each so beautiful it's like being a kid at a candy counter.

But for the best results, plan to use the same color in masses or groups. This provides an impact to the eye that you must see to fully appreciate, but certainly it is much more effective than having a number of colors and types mixed.

To get the greatest effect, plant groups (or group the tubers you're growing in pots or redwood containers) of the same color, then use Maidenhair fern or Holly fern or Chain fern to delineate the start of another drift of another color.

The tuberous begonia must have filtered light—such as that beneath oak trees or lath shelters—or at least protection from the direct rays of the noon and afternoon sun.

THERE MUST be a very high content of organic matter in the soil. A soil largely composed of such organic material as peat, shredded redwood bark, compost, sawdust, shavings or commercial mulches with some coarse builder's sand added. You can use a top dressing of well-aged (not fresh) manure after the tuber is planted if you insist.

They will want plenty of water and can stand overhead sprinkling but never water so that the foliage or flowers are moist come nightfall.

The tuberous begonia is perfect when massed around the base of trees. However, if the roots of the tree are near the surface and it is at all hard to dig down, the best thing to do is plant the tubers in pots and sink the pots in the ground. If there is no difficulty in digging down, you can plant the tubers directly in the ground — provided you've worked plenty of organic material into the soil.

THE TUBER will be concave on one side—that's the part to plant up. Set the tuber on the soft, humus-filled soil and press in so the top is just above the surface. Now keep the soil moist but not wet and when buds begin to form give the begonia its first feeding. Any complete plant food will do but probably the best to use are the soluble or liquid fish types.

Don't try to baby these beauties. They may look delicate and tropical and difficult but they aren't. Just keep them moist and every few weeks give them a light dose of food and you will have flowers so big and beautiful you won't believe they grew in your own garden!

Begonias, of course, are excellent pot plants and in hanging baskets. In both these situations excellent drainage is assured so you will have no problems—if you keep moisture off the foliage at night. If, perchance, you should find mildew on some of the leaves, ask your nurseryman for some fungicide. You can control it in short order.

IN HANGING baskets you usually plant three tubers to give full coverage. You must realize that the first year you will get only modest bloom from these basket types — comparatively modest. The second year and thereafter you'll reap the reward of patience whether in the ground, in pots or hanging baskets, your tuberous begonias will live a long life if you give them a little care. In fact, 10-year-old tubers are not too uncommon.

The plot is, when it gets along in October or November, start giving them less water. Lift them out of the ground tops and all before frost hits. You can put the plant in a box in the basement or garage until the top comes off naturally and easily leaving a big, plump tuber. Then you wash the tubers gently—don't damage the roots on the bottom—and store them in flats where the air can circulate around them.

Easy, yes, but take that little care and you'll have better and better begonias each year.

THERE ARE usually three ways you can buy begonias: As seedlings that should be set out immediately and will give you good but relatively small flowers the first year (you save the tuber and the flowers get bigger); started tubers, these are tubers the nurseryman has thoughtfully started for you but while the first year and go on doing so for many years. Any of these are good buys. Price is usually the only difference.

You buy tubers 2½ inches in diameter and up. These give you big, big, big blooms their flowers are big, they're usually not as big as those of . . . THE tubers.

In Indoor Water Garden Lends Drama To The Home

An indoor water garden is an excellent way to decorate the home with plants that are sturdy, long-lived, and lushly dramatic.

Plants capable of forming roots and thriving when they are kept in ordinary water include philodendron, miniature and variegated ivies, Chinese evergreen, silver pothos, and wandering Jew.

To start an indoor water garden, remove healthy plants carefully from pots. Soil should be gently broken from the roots, and the rest of the earth flushed away by rinsing under lukewarm water. Then plants may be arranged in containers, and shells, coral or pebbles added so the plant roots can cling to them.

Extremely unusual decorative effects can be obtained through careful selection of plants, accessories, and containers. One suggestion is lush philodendron in a tall, tapering green-tint glass bottle. Another has silver pothos in a glass-block type vase partially filled with sea shells, or in a giant brandy snifter containing glass slag.

Of course, for wall decorations, few decorative effects can be as attractive as miniature ivy cascading from a small clear glass container, available in literally hundreds of different shapes and sizes.

For an attractive indoor water garden, choose from a large variety of plants and accessories, or let your florist arrange a grouping that gives maximum beauty with minimum care.

Use Latex Paint

If you paint your clay pots to enhance the decor of your home, use vinyl latex paints, which permit moisture to pass through a container's walls.

Azaleas Have Earned The Favor They Enjoy With Californians

These Beauties Like Our Climate And Thrive With Proper Care

Visit a spring garden show and ask the first 10 people you see: "What are your favorite flowers in the show?"

It's an odds on bet that most of them will answer, "azaleas."

Azaleas and their cousins, rhododendrons, are undoubtedly the showiest of our spring blooming plants in California and we who live here are extremely fortunate to be able to grow them so easily. Except in the Deep South, there are no other states in the nation which can grow any and all of these lovely fixtures of spring.

TO LABEL them as favorites of spring is correct, but some azaelas have been showing occasional color since last fall. These are primarily the Belgian Indicas, some of which break their first blooms when summer is scarcely over. After a flush of color in October and November, they taper off with spotted blooms until spring when they launch into full bloom once again.

The gardener can make his selection of these Belgian Indicas any time during late winter and early spring, for they are sure to be showing color in most nursery showyards. Some varieties that are typical of the breed are Blushing Bride, Albert and Elizabeth, Paul Schame, Sweet Sixteen, Dr. Bergman, and Rose Queen. There are dozens of Belgian Indicas other than these, however, and the gardener should not shop for them with any fixed ideas. The above names will help you identify the type.

Perhaps the "hottest azaleas to hit the nursery trade in many a year are the Sun Azaleas or Southern Indicas. These are mainstays in the southern states and make up major portions of the wonderful azalea gardens in Mobile, Charleston and other places there.

UNTIL RECENTLY however, they have not been widely distributed in California. Their popularity started in Southern California, where they are better adapted to warm weather than some others, and it has slowly spread north where gardeners knew a good thing when they saw it coming.

The Sun Azaleas are typified by named varieties Brilliant, Fielders White, George L. Taber, Phoenicia and Southern Charm. Here again, there are many others to choose from. These azaleas earned their common name by a willingness to grow in full sun. Don't be afraid to give them some shade, however, for they love it.

These Japanese natives are typified by the varieties Coral Bells, Wards Ruby and Hexe. They are profuse in bloom and the flower size is smaller than on the indicas. They make good sized shrubs in time, handsome additions to the garden whether they are in bloom or not.

A fourth type of azalea which is popular in California —especially here in northern California—is the Mollis Hybrid. These are deciduous azaleas, breaking out with a rush of bloom that smothers the plants before any leaves begin to arrive. These will make good sized shrubs in time and provide gardeners who grow them with brilliant splashes of color. They are colorful in fall, too, when the leaves turn to crimson and orange before dropping off. Plant them where you won't mind their winter bareness.

RHODODENDRONS are big brothers (or big cousins) of the azaleas and if you compare their blooms, you will easily note the similarities. They are ideally suited to climates here around San Francisco Bay and this is where they get their major play in the state. They love growing under oaks, and mature plantings will actually grow right up into the oak trees, giving the illusion that the oaks are blooming.

Be they azaleas or rhododendrons, they have the same liking for a rich, acid soil, plenty of moisture at the roots and overhead, too, and regular feeding. Ask your nurseryman to recommend a good plant food or foods.

Work plenty of leaf mold into the soil at planting and mulch with peat moss and leaf mold to conserve moisture and to increase acidity in the soil.

Unsightly Views Can Be Hidden

Do you see an unattractive clothes pole from your kitchen window? Or an always-open garage door? Or a rough fence?

Why not hide the unsightly view by planting morning glory seeds around or in front of the objectionable features. Plants grow rapidly, climb if given support, and furnish large, beautiful flowers in pink, white, or the most popular sky blue.

There is also a double pink, Rose Marie, and a mixture of doubles, Tinkerbell's Petticoat.

OLDER THAN THE redwood is the Pinus Aristata. One of the oldest of living things, it is found in the Sierra with up to 4,500 annual growth rings. The slow-growing pine is excellent for either yard or patio. (Independent-Journal photo)

THE PINWHEEL is a new Gloriosa Daisy being introduced this year by Burpee Seeds. It has a bold, five-inch flower in mahogany and gold. The plant grows to about two and a half feet tall.

Don't Overlook The Perennials In Your Garden

These Stalwarts Can Contribute A Lot To Your Landscaping Plan

They may not provide the same "riot of color" which annuals are capable of, but individually, they more than hold their own, and when used for spot color to round out a border, perennials can be mightily appealing.

WE KNOW OF few annuals, for instance, with the individual beauty of a Transvaal Daisy.

The aristocratic bearing and lovely pastel colors of this African import make it a featured plant in any garden. Nurserymen offer Transvaal Daisies in gallon cans, and the plants should be set no deeper than you find them in the can. They must have perfect drainage to thrive.

Day Lilies are usually overlooked by the gardener who seeks easy color. They require no cultural effort, yet Day Lilies will give you many weeks of bloom. Plant them on the edge of a lawn, where normal watering reaches them, and start enjoying their warm, vibrant colors.

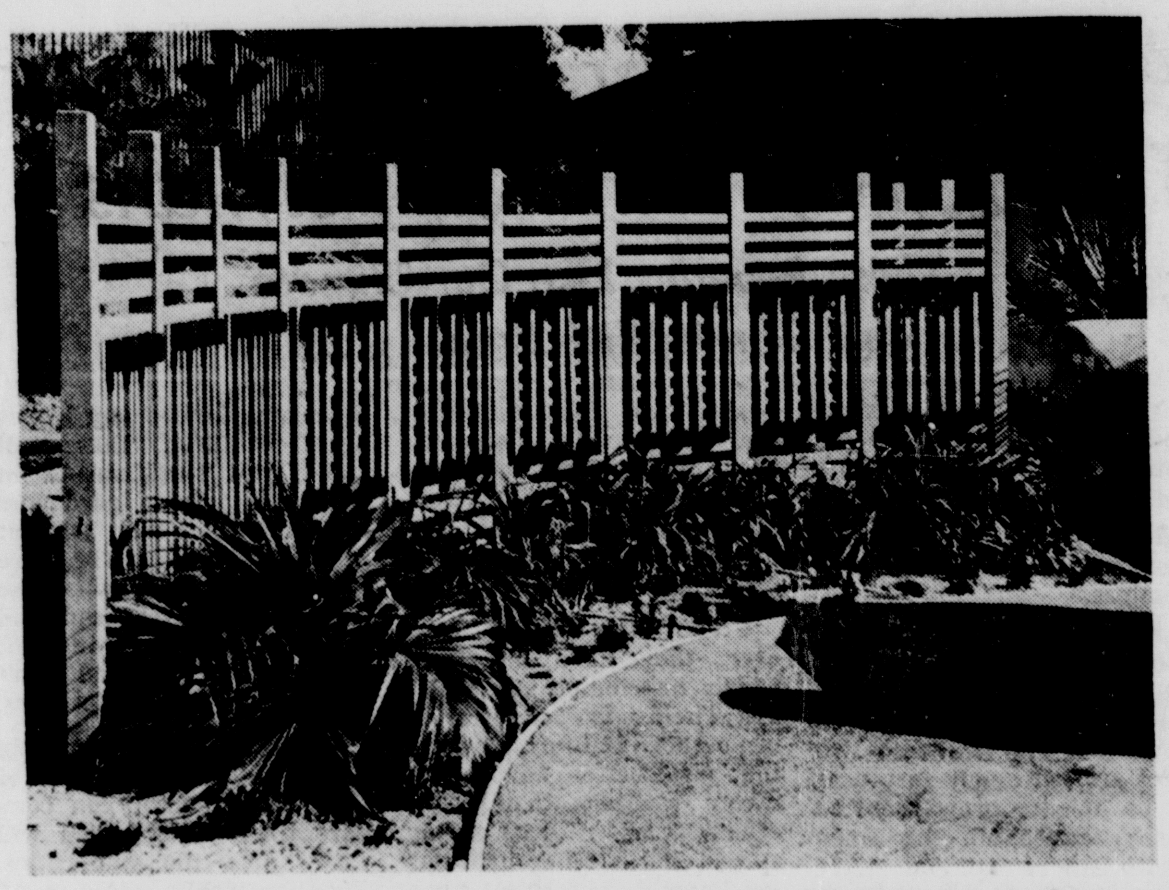

Shasta Daisies should be in every California garden, not only as a tribute to Luther Burbank, who developed them, but for their rugged good looks under all manner of conditions. Shasta Daisies literally thrive on neglect, but they bloom longer and more profusely with water and regular cutting.

THERE ARE many such perennials for Northern Californians to try.

Tall garden Phlox, with its gorgeous heads of bloom in many colors, are showpieces when given the sun and water they need. Japanese Anemones, those tall Windflowers of old-fashioned gardens, will highlight the rear of a semi-shaded border in late summer and fall. Hybrid Gazanias, lush improvements on the old parking-strip daisy, provide a rich and sun-loving cover for a problem embankment.

Tasty Edging

FENCING, though often neglected, is usually the most important single part of your landscaping. It serves as a background for your plantings, and as a theme-setting backdrop for all your outdoor activities. Here are two attractive assets to any yard, both built of redwood. At top, a grille screens the carport from the living area, but does not cut off breezes or create an enclosed atmosphere. Unlike many redwood fences, this one is painted. At left, a design by architect Charles Warren Callister with three marks of distinction: The specially-designed post caps, the saw-textured redwood and the translucent plastic insets that flank each post. The California Redwood Assn., Dept. PF-9, 617 Montgomery Street, San Francisco, 11, Calif., offers a booklet of fence ideas entitled "Redwood Fences" for a 10-cent handling charge.

Lawn Or Substitute, Be Sure It Gets Off To A Good Start

You'll never convince a man who loves his lawn that there is any substitute for a good carpet of green. And, in truth, there really isn't.

For the well-groomed lawn is more elegant underfoot, more soothing to the eye, and more tolerant of traffic than any ground cover yet invented. Even the dedicated greenskeeper will admit, however, that there are times and places to use a lawn substitute.

If you are plain unwilling to care for a lawn, for instance, then by all means plant a substitute—or hire a gardener.

If you have an area too large for lawn, then try part lawn and part substitute.

IF YOU HAVE a sloping area that is hard to keep watered, a parking strip that's a problem to mow, plant a substitute.

You'll usually be ahead of the game.

The California Assn. of Nurserymen tells us that the first essential to planting either a lawn or its stand-in is a good seedbed or planting bed. The ground should be well worked and for seed it should be raked smooth and free of clods. Ground covers may be planted with less preparation; but thorough cultivation will assure a faster start in life.

The single most important step to establishing a fine carpet of grass is to work humus galore into the planting area. Peat moss and steer manure are both excellent humus builders and nurserymen find it's hard to oversupply either.

If you rent a power tiller, be sure to use it for working in humus before returning it. Once the bed is prepared, consult your dealer about the various lawn seed mixes. And once the lawn is planted, be sure it never dries out while it is getting started. A top layer of peat or manure helps to conserve moisture.

AS FOR LAWN substitutes such as Ivy, Thyme, Dichondra and others, your nurseryman can define their comparative merits. Just be sure to tell him how much traffic the cover will have to bear.

Dichondra will take it the way a lawn will, but the others are less tolerant of trodding feet. Best be sure before you plant.

To assure a weed free planting, you might consider pre-planting sterilization of the soil, eliminating noxious weed seed. Your nurseryman can recommend a product.

Make The Space For Vegetable Garden Count

As garden space becomes ever smaller, the home vegetable garden becomes more and more scarce. And the gardener who would grow his own food — or part of it — should seek the greatest harvest from what limited space he has.

Pole Beans (about one pole to each member of the family), squash (Summer, Crookneck, etc.), tomatoes planted against a sun-warmed fence or wall, are three vegetables that produce heavily without taking up much space.

Supplement these with some pot-grown herbs and you have the makings of many a good dish.

Here's Difference In Growing Pole And Bush Beans

Both Taste Good, But They Vary Considerably In Culture

The distinction between wax and green beans is only a slight difference in flavor and color. But there are great differences in culture between bush and pole beans.

Pole beans are not as hardy as bush beans, so cannot be planted until the weather is settled and the soil warm. On the other hand, bush beans may be planted as early as a week before average date of last frost.

POLE BEANS need more attention than bush beans because poles must be set for them and, as they grow, they must be trained and sometimes tied to these supports. Bush beans do not need this care.

However, pole beans continue to grow, bloom and ripen beans all summer long from one planting, while bush beans usually must be planted every two or three weeks until the beginning of August to insure steady picking.

Most varieties of bush beans will bear a second crop if plants are left in place after the first is harvested. But there will be a long time of no production before that second crop is ready to pick.

Just as with other vegetables, plant breeders have been at work with beans, with the result that varieties have been bred to ripen all their crop at once, like Pearlgreen, which has white seeds. This makes them ideal to grow for the person who wishes to can or freeze beans since the entire operation may be done at one time.

OTHER VARIETIES have been especially bred to resist the commonest bean diseases, like mosaic, greasy pod and powdery mildew. The same variety Pearlgreen, mentioned above, is resistant to mosaic, Topcrop resists that disease and also greasy pod. Wade is resistant to mosaic and powdery mildew.

Such resistance will mean little to you unless you have had trouble, in previous years, with one or another of these diseases. In this case, choose a variety which is resistant to the disease you fear.

SOME BEANS are especially productive. Executive and Gardengreen are two of these, but there are many others, including the older variety, Bountiful.

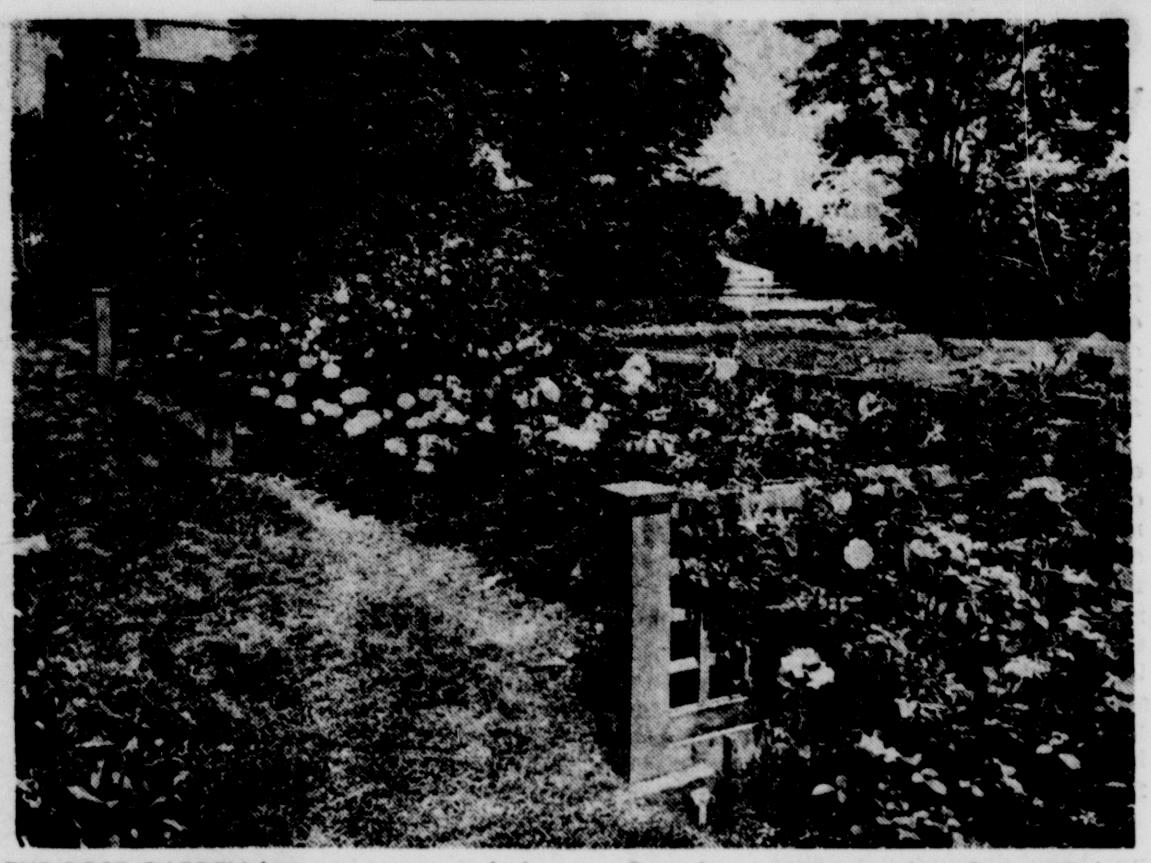

Still other beans may be used fresh or dried, after their seeds have mtaured at the end of the season. Streamliner, Italian Bean and Tenderpod are among these varieties.

There are fewer new varieties among yellow pod or wax beans than among the green beans. Cherokee and Choctaw are both good wax beans; Choctaw a particularly heavy yielder. Kinghorn wax is recommended for freezing or canning as well as use when fresh. Pencil Pod wax, an older variety, is still first class.

Among pole beans, Kentucky Wonder continues to have wonderful flavor and is available in a rust-resistant strain, as well as in a yellow color as Kentucky Wonder Wax.

BLUE COCO is said to have the finest eating quality of any bean. The blue color of its pods turns green when cooked.

The ornamental Scarlet Runner bean and its white-flowered counterpart bear beans which are edible and, for the lazy person who dislikes even the picking. Yard-Long beans (really 18 to 28 inches long) are available.

THE ROSE GARDEN becomes more orderly and more easily cared for when broken up into sections such as this one has been. Each parcel can be apportioned to a particular variety or color of rose. Culture can then be applied accordingly. And the effect is most attractive, too. (Photo by American Assn. of Nurserymen)

A Blooming Marvel Is Marguerite

You seldom see them in the garden shows, and please don't ask us why. For when it comes to adding color in any corner, Marguerites are really blooming marvels.

These durable Daisies bloom in spring; they bloom in summer and they bloom in fall. In Marin, they even bloom through winter, which just about completes the cycle. Add to this their easy culture and you have the fool-proof answer to any gardener's dreams.

We think of Marguerites as shrubs. Actually, they are perennials—members of the Chrysanthemum family—and many gardeners like to treat them as such by starting new plants each year. Those who don't start from scratch, renew old plantings by cutting them back in late fall or early spring, sacrificing a short period of bloom while the new growth takes hold.

There is something to be said for the annual replanting of new Marguerites since, as with their "cousin" Chrysanthemums, they seem healthier and happier when young. Unlike Chrysanthemums, however, they don't need any pampering to keep them at their best.

THE KOHLRABI is a little known and much misunderstood vegetable. A member of the cabbage family, it is delicious when picked and eaten before it is overgrown. The taste resembles the turnip slightly, but is milder.

Coat Of Paint For Fence Will Serve Two Purposes

The pleasing effect created by a brand new paint job on your house can be spoiled by a shabby, weather-beaten fence. Painting the fence not only will remove it from the eyesore category; it will prolong its life by protecting it from the elements.

Each of the two major types of fences, metal and wood, requires a different paint treatment. Probably the best and quickest way to paint a wire fence is with a long-napped roller which will "embrace" the wire and coat the surface in a single pass. Rollers also speed up the painting of fences made of round iron bars or rods. Square rods may require brush treatment.

METAL FENCES that have not been previously painted must first be given a coat of anti-corrosive metal primer. If there is any rust, it should be removed with steel wool, followed by a brushing to take off any loose dirt. Galvanized wire fences require a special primer known as zinc dust-zinc oxide paint or, if that is not available, a zinc chromate primer.

After the primer coat has dried hard, follow with a decorative top coat of exterior enamel. You can match the color of the house, the color of the trim or any contrasting color.

The construction of the wooden fence will determine, to a large degree, the best method of application. If the boards and slats touch each other, you can use a regular house paint brush, a larger roller or a spray gun. If the space between the boards or pickets is small, a smaller brush or roller will be better. It may be possible to coat both edges of adjacent slats at the same time with a slim roller.

NEW WOODEN fencing, as well as bare spots on old fences, should be given an initial coat of house paint primer. This should be followed, when dry, with regular house paint in the color of your choice, or you can use trim and trellis paint or exterior enamel.

If you have some kind of a masonry fence or wall, it requires a paint that will resist the alkali present in cement, concrete and mortar. Good service will be given by exterior latex masonry or house paints, swimming pool paints or oil modified masonry paints.

Variegation Adds Spice To Garden

It's amusing when you stop to consider it, that variegation in the foliage of a plant usually means the plant is lacking in food. However, many plants actually have variegated foliage.

Like the knots in pine, however, this break in a plant's color has been turned to good horticultural use. Today we find nurseries full of variegated shrubs and their popularity is on the increase.

Their overuse can be unappealing, but their judicious placement in shrub borders can provide a real key to variety in the garden. Spot them here and there where they will stand out against darker green companions, or feature them in limited accompaniment to their own kind.

THE LARGE-LEAF HOLLY is an especially happy choice in Marin. It is somewhat hardier than the popular English Holly, and it grows as high as 20 feet with a spread of 10 or 12 feet. Self-fertile, it makes a beautiful specimen tree or shrub. (Independent-Journal photo)

THE AUSTRALIAN TEA TREE is a very graceful bush that is ideal for use as a screen. In addition to the beauty of its form and white flowers, it has the advantage of being able to withstand and defy even the strongest winds. (Independent-Journal photo)

Protect Your Shade Trees Against Pesky Caterpillars

And when you find any of these pests, spray as soon as possible to prevent plant damage.

These leaf eaters are the immature form of a number of different genera and species of insects. This accounts for the variations in body structure, color, time of appearance and feeding habits of the caterpillars you may find on your trees.

SOME MOVE freely over the tree, relying on camouflaging coloration, body spines or other physical characteristics for protection against natural enemies. Others spin large, silken webs and a few, such as the bagworm, use leaf and twig fragments to build around their bodies spindle-shaped structures which they carry constantly as they feed and move about.

Some species of caterpillars feed only on broad-leaved trees and shrubs, some only on evergreens, and others may be found on both deciduous and evergreen plants.

Normally, the feeding period for any given species is completed within four to six weeks. Caterpillars are voracious eaters, however, and when many are present even a large tree may be entirely stripped of its leaves.

Since each leaf is a miniature "factory" where raw food materials are converted to forms suitable for plant use, loss of many leaves results in distinct injury to the plant. Growth for that season is retarded, and the tree or shrub may be so weakened that it succumbs to other, secondary ailments.

CONTROL measures should be applied while the caterpillars are still young and small. Detection of the pests at this stage requires frequent and rather close examination of the trees. Inspect the undersides of the leaves; this is where young caterpillars usually begin feeding. They are noticeable as tiny, thread-like worms; you may find several on a single leaf.

Effective insecticides include arsenate of lead, DDT, malathion and others which are available at garden supply stores. These materials are applied in spray form. The manufacturer's directions for use, which you will find on the container label, should be followed exactly.

For best control results, the infested plant should be covered thoroughly with the spray material. Hand-operated garden sprayers are adequate for small plants, but when large trees are involved a reputable tree service organization should be engaged to do the spraying.

Sometimes No Paint Is Needed

Wood that appears to need painting often needs nothing more than a cleaning.

The quickest and easiest way to accomplish this is by rinsing the siding with water from a hose. Aside from the cleansing action of the water, the pressure from the hose helps to push the dirt from the wood.

Must you be warned to doublecheck every window to be certain it is tightly closed?

THE BEAUTY OF THE annual flower is typified by the Larkspur. The varieties these two tots are gathering are the White Swan and the Flamingo with deep salmon, double flowers. They are exceptionally good cut flowers. And even without a bud in sight, the foliage is a pretty sight.

Potpourri Preserves Fragrance

Spiced Petals In A Jar Keep Years

When you're in the garden this spring collecting some perfect roses for a bright arrangement, reserve blooms from some of your fragrant varieties to make the ever-popular potpourri.

A potpourri is nothing more than a mixture of spiced rose petals in a jar, yet it preserves the fragrance of roses for many years. Just lifting the lid can fill a room with the sweetest smell of summer, even in coldest winter.

MAKING A potpourri is still as easy as it was in grandma's day. There are special rose jars for the purpose, but any attractive bowl or globe with a tight-fitting lid will do as well.

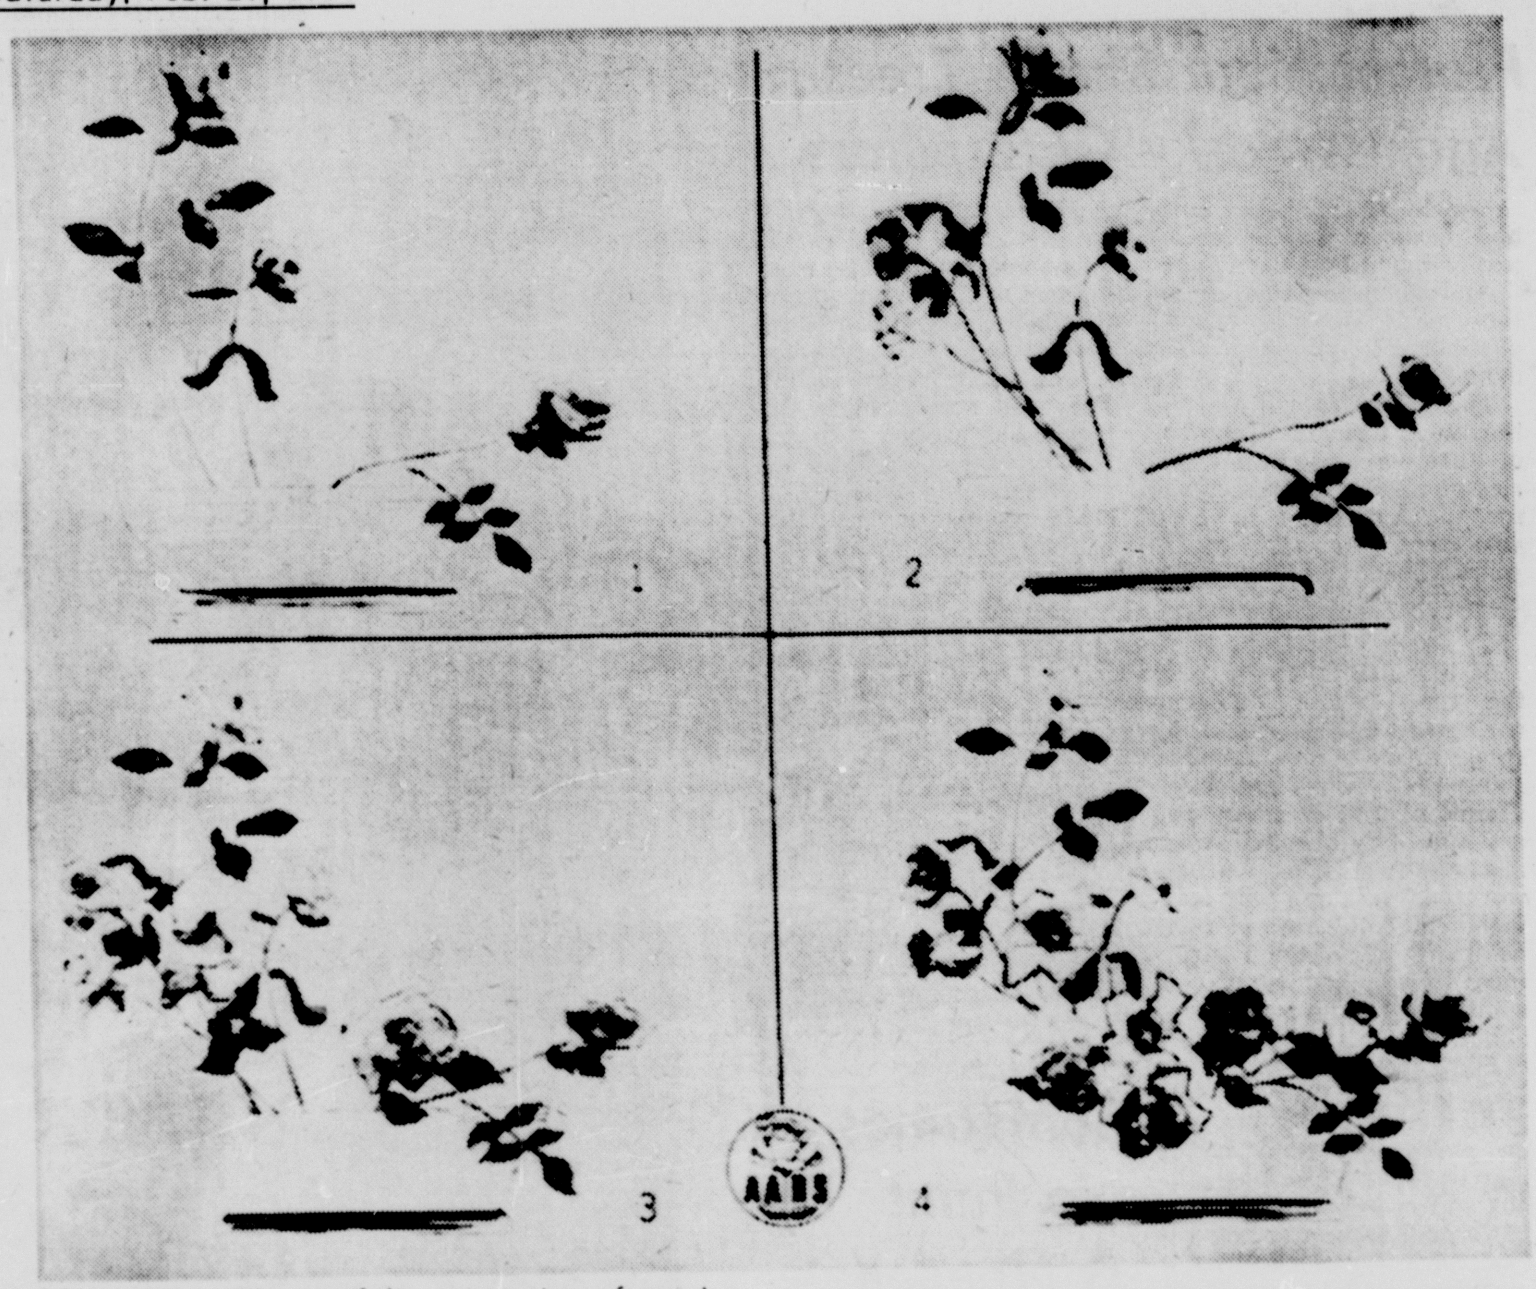

Start by collecting only your most fragrant blooms. Flowers from varieties like Granada and Saratoga, the 1964 All-America Roses, are perfect and well worth cutting for the purpose.

Both of them have the true "old-fashioned" rose perfume. Other varieties particularly noted for their fragrance that you can use are the 1963 AARS winners, Tropicana and Royal Highness.

You can cut the blooms in any stage, right up to the fully-opened flower, provided they are still rich in color.

REMOVE THE petals from the cut roses promptly and spread them out thinly on a screen or a rack of cheesecloth. Allow them to dry in a warm, airy place, stirring and turning them daily.

Once they are completely dry and become chip-like, they are ready to be packed in the jar in loose layers. At this point, natural spices like cinnamon, allspice, cloves or nutmeg, may be added to each layer. Keep the jar secured tightly until the occasion arises when you want to fill the air with the unmistakable fragrance of roses.

FOR MANY people one of the greatest joys of growing roses is to be able to go into the garden and cut blooms for arrangements. Attractive composition are easy to create.

You can make this striking crescent arrangement with a dozen blooms of hybrid teas like the red and yellow Granada, lush orange Tropicana, or delicate pink Royal Highness. Floribundas serve just as well and Saratoga, a pure white, is perfect for arrangements. All of these varieties are All-America Rose award winners and are certain to provide excellent blooms and color for arrangements.

You Needn't Live In Citrus Belt To Enjoy These Trees

Whether you grow them for food or show, you'll harvest pleasure aplenty from its handsome representatives.

The California Assn. of Nurserymen points up this dual role of citrus as a reminder to gardeners in the non-citrus belts.

YOU DON'T have to eat an orange or a grapefruit to enjoy it. The ornamental qualities of the whole family can be enjoyed up and down the state.

In our coastal climates too cool to sweeten up an orange, an orange tree full of color can still be yours. And even where winter frosts are known to be severe, tubbed dwarf citrus can be tucked into sheltered pockets out of harm's way.

Actually, even here out of a citrus belt, the dwarf members of the family serve your purpose well. They bear heavily for their size, and the fruit is of standard quality if you can bear to pick and eat such a colorful contribution to the garden.

There was a time when the dwarf Meyer Lemon was just about the only dwarf citrus you ever saw. Today, the gardener has his pick of an ever-increasing number of varieties. Oranges, kumquats, limes, Mandarins, grapefruit and lemons come your way in container-sized versions of their orchard-grown counterparts. They are bred for home gardening and need only a minimum of space.

BY GROWING these dwarfs in tubs, you can often harvest edible oranges in areas too cool to ripen them properly. The trick is to place the tub against a wall that reflects heat and helps to create more thermal conditions than normally prevail.

Unless you are starved for a fresh-picked orange, however, you'll probably elect to leave the crop on your tubbed dwarf. As we noted above, it looks so nice that it's really a shame to harvest it.

The Balsam: A Bush Filled With Blooms

The fully double flowers look like miniature roses and are borne on the top of the plant (quite unlike the old-time balsams which had flowers underneath the leaves).

BALSAMS ARE easy to grow from seeds sown in the soil outdoors after all danger of frost is over. Cover the seeds to a depth of one-eighth inch and walk along, one foot in front of the other, over the planted row to firm soil to seeds.

After the seedlings grow four inches high, transplant them to stand 18 inches apart. You can plant them solidly, for a mass of color, or group them, about a dozen plants to the group, in spaces where spring-flowering perennials have bloomed or for colorful accents in front of evergreens.

Wherever you set them for plants so that you get the effect of massed bloom. Few other annuals have flowers spaced so closely.

WHEN buying balsam seeds, remember that there are dwarf sorts for bedding, taller varieties for specimens. All the double-flowers prefer heavy soil and quite a bit of moisture.

You Can Choose From Many Vines

And There Are Plenty Of Good Reasons For Planting Some

You could name several reasons for planting vines—to screen off an unsightly view, to cover a bare wall or lend texture to an otherwise uninteresting fence—but the reason most of us give first is simply that vines can produce such a colorful show in the garden.

There's no minimizing the contribution of a flowering vine which likes to climb up high and show off its bloom.

In Marin we have an exceptionally good selection of flowering vines, and the one that usually comes first to mind is Bougainvillea. This dazzler stands unchallenged when it comes to vivid color, and while one thinks first of the common purple form which has been a California landmark for generations, there are many newer hybrids to make Bougainvillea more useful.

Visit a nurseryman and check the selection of Bougainvillea varieties he has to offer. You may be surprised to find not one, but several red forms as well as a golden-flowered variety to supplement the familiar purple standby. Ask to see Barbara Karst (red), Crimson Jewel (red), Texas Dawn (rose-pink), Orange King (gold to rose) and California Gold. There are others, too.

BOUGAINVILLEA stands almost any cultural condition you want to give it, but it blooms more profusely and with better color when kept slightly on the dry side. If grown where frequently watered, Bougainvillea should have good drainage. Under no circumstances should you feed this vine. It only cuts down on the bloom.

Another vine that puts forth myriad blooms is the Star Jasmine. Although it has none of the bold color display of Bougainvillea, it has a wonderful sedate charm which endears it to gardeners. The tiny pinwheels of bloom — a creamy white—are hauntingly fragrant and surprisingly prominent against the rich green foliage of the vine fabric.

We use Star Jasmine to climb a pillar or cover a trellis, but we also use it as a ground cover by tying its stems down and letting them mound up in a jumble of pleasant foliage and flower. Nurserymen also suggest growing it in a tub, using a center stake to train it up and keeping it pruned to discourage overgrowth.

THE ARE several trumpet vines available in nurseries, and one that is sure to please is the Lavender Trumpet Vine.

This vigorous climber produces dark green foliage and 3-inch trumpet flowers in spring and summer. Another for spring-summer bloom is the Yellow Trumpet Vine and an excellent variety for sheltered gardens is the Scarlet Trumpet Vine. You see this rambling, bright-flowered beauty more in southern California especially, but also in our north coastal gardens where a sheltered spot can be found for it.

It is more tender than other trumpet vines, however, and is apt to freeze when grown away from the coast.

One of the best vines introduced in California from more tropical climates is the Giant Burmese Honeysuckle. Here along the coastal strip, where winters are mildest, you find wonderful, free-flowering specimens of this handsome vine.

GIANT BURMESE Honeysuckle produces an incredible surge of growth when once it settles down to growing. The big, glossy leaves will completely cover a good-sized wall or an arbor, and the clusters of long, tubular yellow or white flowers hang in profusion through several warm months of the year. Their honeysuckle fragrance will keep you happy over an equally long time.

Full sun is not too much for the Giant Burmese Honeysuckle, though part shade will not bother it. Plenty of water with good drainage will hasten the early growth.

Gardeners who are unfamiliar with vines should ask a nurseryman what type of support they need. Some climb by twining; others hang on with tendrils, and still others have little suction cups to grip a wall. Just be sure you know which has what before you start training it upward.

HERE'S a CLEVER WAY to make sure your house plants don't dry out while you are away on vacation this spring or summer. Slip a plastic drycleaning clothesbag over the plant to retard water loss by transpiration. Several thicknesses of newspaper can be spread in the planter covering the soil to arrest water loss through evaporation.

March Is Month For Delphiniums

Delphiniums can be planted in March and are extremely useful as back-border plants or along grape-stake or similar types of wood fence.

The Pacific Hybrids are among the best and now come in many colors. However, there are few things as good for creating a feeling of depth in the small garden as rich blue delphiniums in a far corner.

THE RIGHT TOOL for the right job can simplify your gardening and yard-upkeep chores. For instance, this narrow-bladed trowel that comes to a point is ideal for the planting of tiny seedlings and bulbs with a minimum of soil disturbance.
